WILSON TO DO SOME WORK

Important Measures Demanding His Attention Will Be Taken Up

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 13.—The President's condition today remained practically the same as it has for the past several days, according to the official bulletin issued from the White House at 12:15 o'clock this afternoon.

Today's bulletin, which went into further details than any yet issued, was as follows:

"The President's condition remains much the same as for the past several days. His temperature, with the exception of one day, his pulse and respiration rate, heart action and blood pressure are normal and have been so since the onset of his illness. His kidneys are functioning normally.

"GRAYSON, RUFFIN, STITT."

WILL TAKE UP BIG BILLS.

Further indication that the President is able to transact business when necessary was forthcoming from the White House today when it was stated that three bills recently passed by Congress will be referred to the President for his personal attention.

These are the prohibition enforcement measure, the amendments putting "teeth" in the food control bill, and a bill designed to curb rent profiteering in the District of Columbia.

When he was asked, following the issuances of the bulletin, to comment on the letter of Senator Moses, in which the New Hampshire legislator said the President was suffering from a cerebral lesion, Rear-Admiral Grayson declared:

"If such a thing had occurred the press would have been informed."

Dr. Grayson reiterated his previous

MAYNARD WILL START BACK TOMORROW

San Francisco, Oct. 13.—Lieutenant B. W. Maynard will start on his return flight to Mineola Field tomorrow afternoon at 1:13 o'clock, it was officially announced here today.

Mineola, L. I., Oct. 13.—Captain Lowell H. Smith arrived here at 10:30:4p o'clock this morning, being the third of the Western contestants in the trans-continental air race to finish the 3,701-mile flight from San Francisco.

Smith left Binghamton, last of the control stations before reaching Roosevelt Field, at 9:02, completing the intervening 155 miles in one hour and forty-eight minutes and forty-two seconds.

The eastbound flyers in the great air contest had better success in getting through than those bound west, as only one of the flyers who left Mineola has reached San Francisco—Lieutenant R. W. Maynard.

A telegram to the American Flying Club from Major Charles T. Menoher, director of the American air service at Washington, states that original flying conditions will prevail and that the airmen who have reached the Eastern and Western terminal control stations will not be held until October 20, as reported from Washington on Saturday.

According to the rules, the airmen arriving at San Francisco and Roosevelt Field may remain from forty-eight to ninety-six hours before start-

Fifteen thousand persons were standing in line when the Army Retail Stores in South Boston were opened today. This is the biggest crowd since the stores began business on the "cash and carry" plan. The people were formed in four lines, stretching from warehouse No. 2, back to Summer street extension.

In order to care for the tremendous number of patrons the stores were open all day, despite the fact that it is a holiday.

A salesroom was opened in Fall River today, in charge of Captain John Gibbon, while the Providence store, with Major C. F. Falkenthal in charge reported big sales.

Saturday's receipts for the Boston stores were given as $3,783.87, and the mail order reported $28,000, bringing the total mail order receipts to date to $147,000.

The sale of assorted soups has been resumed. In the miscellaneous department shaving brushes were placed on sale at 15 cents; griddles were back, together with gloves, and claw hatchets are selling for $1. Long-handled shovels were also on sale for $1, and light wool socks at 25 cents a pair were in great demand.

Much of the credit of the success of the "cash and carry" system goes to Chief Clerk E. P. Torpey, whose work has been untiring.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. B. Barry of the mail order department announced today that the stock of canned sweet corn was exhausted. He also stated that the supply of peas was low, although there is a possibility that additional supplies may be received.

Three additional chutes were opened into the postoffice today, making a total of ten now in operation. This necessitated the employment of thirty-three additional helpers, including packers, checkers and markers.

Two thousand mail orders were handled by the department on Saturday and it was expected that 2,500 would be cared for today. The employes of this department voluntarily worked half a day yesterday in an effort to reduce the number of orders on hand.

BROOKLINE IS SNOWED UNDER BY MALDEN

Schoolboy football in Greater Boston got away to its real start this morning when six of the most popular junior gridiron elevens hereabouts got busy before large crowds.

The surprise game of the morning was the Malden and Brookline clash, in which Malden showed a team that will take a whole lot of beating in the Suburban League. Brookline was snowed under, 41 to 6.

Boston College High took a fall out of Boston Latin at Fenway Park, winning by 9 to 3, the victory coming in the last minute when a fumbled punt was turned into a touchdown.

Somerville went over to Waltham before lunch and returned with a 6 to 0 win. Although outweighed greatly, Waltham was game and gave Somerville a run for its money.

All the other school teams in and around Boston were playing this afternoon, with large crowds swowing that the boom in football is not at all to be confined to the collegiate game.

BADLY LEAKING SHIP CALLS FOR HELP

Racing against time and fate the revenue cutter Acushnet was rushed to sea today in an effort to locate the United States Shipping Board's steamship Amnonoosuc, Norfolk for Genoa, reported broken down, leaking fore and aft, and in danger of sinking.

Radio messages telling of the plight of the Amnonoosuc failed to give her position. As the Acushnet dashed toward mid-Atlantic every wireless station along the coast tried to locate the ship.

A wireless message from the steamer Vallari today said that the Amnonoosuc had given three different positions. The Vallari also sent at rest a report that the steamer Port Chalmer was on fire at sea and in danger of destruction.

The Port Chalmer was talking by wireless with an Italian steamer about the Amnonoosuc and the Port Chalmer suggested sending up rockets. This conversation was intercepted and was garbled until when it reached shore it had the Port Chalmer ablaze.

First news that the Amnonoosuc was disabled came in a wireless message from the steamer on Friday. The message was picked up by the Navy Yard here. Further efforts were made to discover the Amnonoosuc position. Other wireless stations took up the work and all vessels within radio calling distance were notified. The Acushnet put out from here last night.

Today the following message came from the Vallari. Here is the correct story. The Port Chalmer is not on fire and was with two other ships, one an Italian, until 4 o'clock this morning. We are looking for the American ship Amnonoosuc, broken down and leaking fore and aft and in danger of sinking, as her pumps gave out.

"We not know her exact position. Has given three, all different, all within twenty miles of each other. No one was seen in the vicinity of place given. When the Port Chalmer was reported on fire by Washington we investigated. Port Chalmer and Italian ship were talking about sending up rockets last night, which caused the story that Port Chalmers was on fire."

MUTINY ON HIGH SEAS REPORTED

British Schooner Onita Is Believed Scene of Double Tragedy

Aboard the British schooner Onita, from Oporto to Burin, a tragedy occurred on Wednesday night which resulted in the death of the master and the abandonment of the ship by the remainder of the crew on Thursday morning at three o'clock.

The survivors are aboard the steamship Sarmonia, which today wirelessed for assistance.

As yet there is no coherent story of the happenings aboard the little Newfoundland schooner. Indications are, however, that there was a mutiny aboard and that the riotous crew killed the master and mate. The Sarmonia reported that the trouble happened in latitude 47.05, longitude 18.45. This would place the tragedy somewhere in the vicinity of the established ocean trade routes and parallel to New York, almost in mid-ocean.

The Sarmonia reported that the policemen must be at quarantine and there take off the crew. It is assumed that the New York police are meant as the Sarmonia is bound for that port.

The prisoners, if they are charged with murder, would be prosecuted in the British courts, inasmuch as the tragedy, if there were one, was committed on the high seas and under the British flag. Hence in the event of prisoners being landed in New York they probably would be surrendered to the British consul and sent to Newfoundland for trial.

SENATE PUZZLED BY MYSTERY OVER CAUSE OF WILSON'S ILLNESS

RUMORS DESCRIBE AILMENT AS OF SERIOUS NATURE

assertions that the President's mind was keen and active and that he has been improving steadily, although slowly.

MUST NOT DO TOO MUCH.

Commenting upon a statement from the White House that three bills which recently passed Congress would be brought to the President's personal attention, Dr. Grayson said that this was a practice he would discourage unless the matters were highly important. Bills would be taken up with the President, he said, only when they were extremely urgent.

Senator Moses says the President suffered some kind of a cerebral lesion, either during his speech at Pueblo or immediately thereafter, and one of the ready discernible results is a slight facial paralysis." He adds that the President "may live," but says "he will not be any material force or factor in anything."

As a result of the publication of the Moses letter, which brings to the public attention statements which have been circulating around the Capitol for days, an inquiry is likely to be ordered by the Senate. It is certain at least that an attempt will be made to obtain definite information as to the exact nature of the President's illness and, if the situation warrants it, to arrange for the discharge of the duties of President by Vice-President Marshall.

There was small attempt to conceal indignation on the part of White House attaches today over the continued circulation of alarming rumors concerning the President's condition, given some color by Senator Moses' letter, which, however, he now admits was based upon hearsay and was not intended for publication.

Sure Relief

Admiral Grayson, who is not only the President's personal physician, also a close friend and almost constant associate, takes a purely professional view of the undercurrent of unauthorized gossip which has been reported persistently since the President's return from his speaking tour. He insists that he will stand by his official bulletins which he declares have been absolutely candid.

Dr. Grayson made several sarcastic references to Senator Moses last night, among other things saying that he did not understand the senator to be learned in medical arts. Time and again Dr. Grayson has told White House newspapermen that President Wilson's mind was very clear and active that he was not so sick as to lose his sense of humor and recently that he has shown marked progress in relaxing from the nervous strain caused by overwork.

At Paris, the physician has said, midnight would often overtake the President before he could finish his work, but he would be "up and at it" early every morning. The continued pressure of such work over the long war period makes the cause of the present neurasthenic condition a natural development, Dr. Grayson has said, but the effect has been a matter for continued and close study by the physicians.

While Dr. Grayson has recently confidently assured those about him that the President was responding excellently to the rest cure and that there was no reason for apprehension as to the final outcome, nevertheless the official bulletins have been careful to indicate that the President's recovery would require the processes of time and he urged patience upon the part of the President's friends even as he insists upon utter relaxation upon on the part of the distinguished patient.

RUMORS CIRCULATED.

The brevity of the White House bulletins, coupled with the bitterness engendered by the peace treaty and League of Nations covenant fight is largely responsible for many of the rumors that have been circulated about the President. Gossip has placed his ailment as being most serious, and one likely to precipitate an interregnum, and there has been no clean cut denial from the White House.

This state of affairs has caused Senatorial leaders to discuss the possibility of naming a committee of inquiry to determine whether or not the President is able to carry on the affairs of his office, and if not to provide that the Vice-President assume his duties.

Party leaders in the Senate admit that while such discussion had been in progress it is deemed premature, and that nothing is likely to be done until an idea could be secured as to how long a period the President's recovery would take.

It is explained that none of the Senators is positive on the subject of the President's illness because he has seen only the immediate members of his family, Mrs. Wilson and the three girls. He was not permitted to see his son-in-law, former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, when the latter called at the White House last week.

SENATE MAY ACT.

Moreover, it is pointed out, no legislation of an emergency nature is before Congress at this time, and there is no great necessity of action by the Senate on the ordinary bills. These will become laws in ten days even though they do not bear his signature.

The danger, however, providing silence is maintained by the White House, is that some one in the Senate may introduce a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee of inquiry. Such action—in the face of the general ignorance of the President's illness and its progress—might bring matters to a head and compel the Senate to act.

One or two sharp remarks have already been passed on the floor of the Senate about the President's illness, but they are as nothing to what has transpired in the cloak rooms.

The President's signature, for instance, was closely scrutinized on an official document that came from the White House, and doubt was expressed as to whether it was the original.

SEES POLITICAL SCHEME.

No resolution expressing sympathy for the President has been offered in Congress to date, it is pointed out by the President's close friends, who insist that nationwide rumors have been set in motion to "cover ulterior political ends."

Mrs. Wilson has been a source of great comfort to the President and a great aid in bringing about his present disposition to temporarily abandon thought of all but the most urgent matters of state. She spends much time reading aloud and speaking with him.

It is known that the President has spent a part of each day either propped up on pillows or in an armchair. Either Mrs. Wilson or the physician and night nurses are constantly by his side.

Mrs. Wilson now is seemingly refreshed by her rest from her travels with the President, which were a severe strain upon her strength. She is said to show no sign of worry and the contrary appears to be the case.

Wilson Had Serious Eye Hemorrhage in Paris

By Universal Service

Philadelphia, Oct. 13.—President Wilson suffered from retinal hemorrhage in Paris, it was learned here today.

It was because of this eye trouble that Dr. Chalmers Da Costa, of this city, was suddenly called to Paris to attend the President while the latter was at the peace conference.

Dr. Da Costa's visit caused much speculation at the time and no satisfactory explanation was given out.

Gish, with Sergeant G. C. Pomeroy, observer, arrived at 9:55 and prepared to follow Captain Sternle within the next hour.

Lieutenant Kiel Wins Second Honors From Major Spatz in Race

Washington, Oct. 13.—Lieutenant Emil Kiel finished 24 minutes and 59 1-5 seconds ahead of Major Carl Spatz in the coast to coast aerial race, according to figures made public by the Air Service of the Army today.

In the opinion of officials of the department, Kiel will get second honors, but there is still a possibility that the actual flying time of some of the aviators who have not yet completed the first lap of the flight may be even faster, it was stated.

Kiel's actual flying time was 28 hours 23 minutes and 58 2-5 seconds and Spatz's 28 hours 47 minutes and 47 seconds.

Martin Bomber Starts From Cleveland, Headed West, With Passengers

By International News Service.

Cleveland, Oct. 13.—With the break of dawn the propellers of the dozen planes competing in the transcontinental air derby, held here over Sunday, began to whir and, one by one, they shot off westward.

Included among the planes getting away was the big Martin bomber, which carries five passengers, the largest number carried by any plane in the race.

Preparations also were made for receiving a number of planes from the East during the day.

The planes got away as follows:

Unofficial Figures Give Smith Better Time for Trip Than "Flying Parson"

Mineola, L. I., Oct. 13.—Captain Lowell H. Smith, who arrived here from San Francisco in the transcontinental air race at 10:32:42 o'clock today, may have beaten the flying time of Lieutenant B. W. Maynard for the 2,701 miles across America. According to his logbook Smith's actual flying time was 24 hours and 36 minutes against Maynard's flying time of 24 hours, 59 minutes and 48½ seconds.

Smith felt the cold keenly on the final leg of the flight from Binghamton. He complained that he had been held up by officials at the control stations at Salt Lake, Rock Island and Des Moines, on the ground that flying conditions were bad. Smith decided that these delays allowed Major Spatz and Lieutenant Kiel (who arrived here Saturday evening), to catch up with him.

"Conditions were all right for flying, so far as I could see, but I was told to wait," said Smith.

"Despite these delays I still believe I would have beaten Spatz and Kiel to Mineola if my machine had not broken down near Cleveland."

Smith explained the accident at Cleveland by saying he had taken some one else's word for the direction to the landing place and lost his bearings. He alighted in a field which was too short and the machine turned over, breaking a propeller strut and a spar.

The radiator of his machine was leaking badly when Smith arrived at Roosevelt Field. He had made temporary repairs, plastering the leak with corn meal, but the radiator was leaking a stream when the plane landed.

FREE IRELAND DEMANDED AT SCOTTISH MEETING

Glasgow, Oct. 13.—An Irish republic was demanded at a meeting here and resolutions were adopted demanding the withdrawal of the English army of occupation from that country.

Mrs. Sheehey Skeffington, widow of the Irish editor slain in the 1915 revolt, said in a speech that Ireland was the training ground of soldiers and that the latter were kept in Ireland to get accustomed to shooting civilians.

Sterling, Oct. 13.—The selectmen have voted to suspend the Sterling Inn's license from October 14 to October 23, inclusive. The reason given to Proprietor D. J. Mahoney was that the 11 o'clock closing law had been violated.

PROBERS WOULD AMERICANIZE MILL WORKERS

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Legislation enforcing Americanization of all citizens of the United States is the one definite result that will come from the investigation of the steel strike by the Educational and Labor Committee of the Senate.

Members of the committee returning to Washington today from a trip into the strike district agreed that there must be legislation for Americanization.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa, chairman of the committee, announced that the committee will meet on Thursday and consider the matter of a report on its investigation and steps looking towards legislation for Americanization.

There was among the members of the committee a lack of hope that anything might be done to settle the strike, but all were hopeful of providing means to prevent a recurrence. The committee was of the opinion that the force of the strike was spent.

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts has a plan for legislation which would restrict immigration to those who will agree to learn the English language within five years after entrance into this country. The penalty for failure to become Americanized would be deportation under Senator Walsh's plan.

"These people must become Americanized or there will be further industrial disorders," Senator Walsh stated.

Persia, Ravaged by War, Needs Aid, Says Prince

By PRINCE FIROUZ,
Foreign Minister of Persia,
(Written for Universal Service.)

Paris, Oct. 12. — Despite her neutrality, Persia suffered terribly during the war. In the Winter of 1917 alone, 90,000 people died of hunger in Teheran, out of a population of 500,000.

Persia is disorganized and needs a stronger government or the help of a big power. We are jealous of our sovereignty in our own country. We are glad of the arrangement with England, but it must not be thought that it prejudices our rights.

We count upon Article X of the League of Nations, of which we are a member, to safeguard all our rights.

FIVE-CENT FARE TO CHURCH IS URGED

Baptist and Presbyterian Ministers in Favor of Some Concession

Baptist and Presbyterian ministers at their meetings today passed resolutions urging a five-cent fare for churchgoers on Sundays, during the hours of service.

This matter came a week ago before the meeting of the Presbyterian ministers in the Christian Endeavor Hall on Mt. Vernon street, and today a committee including Rev. Isaac Ward, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Columbus avenue; Rev. Dr. W. W. Iliff of the First Presbyterian Church, Brookline, and Rev. Daniel Nicholson, pastor of the Scottish Presbyterian Church, South End, were appointed to communicate with other ministerial associations of Greater Boston and afterwards present the combined resolutions of ministers to the president of the Boston Elevated.

"This high cost of carfare makes it hard for the families who have children attending Sunday services and Sunday School," explained Dr. Ward.

FAVORS SPECIAL TICKET.

"Some consideration should be given these people who have to spend often over 30 cents Sundays simply for carfares.

"I believe some concession should be made in reference to carfare on Sunday for people who are attending services and special tickets could be easily placed in the hands of pastors for people in their congregations who need that consideration."

At the Baptist ministers' meeting in Kingsley Hall, the Rev. W. J. Rutledge, pastor of the South Boston Baptist Church, urged a lower rate of fare for his people on Sundays.

"Why not favor the churchgoing people on Sundays," asked this pastor. "They are in a commendable work, keeping up the moral welfare of the community. Lower carfares on Sundays during hours of worship would be one of the most progressive steps for the Boston Elevated to take. It would have the praise of God, and certainly they need it."

WOULD FAVOR THE POOR.

Pastor G. R. Maguire of the Ruggles Street Church, said: "On Sundays the poor should have the same consideration, not only in churchgoing, but suppose a man with eleven children wants to take them all to Franklin Park. Is he going to support the Boston Elevated by paying ten-cent fares? Why not give him some consideration for his large family and give him also the privilege of attending worship on Sundays instead of rushing through the country in an automobile? I am strongly in favor of a five-cent church fare on Sundays."

REFUSE TO MARCH BEHIND

Committee Had Ruled That Body of Armed Men Should Precede Unarmed

A verbal protest by the members of the American Legion, Post 54, in which they refused to march behind the members of the State Guard in the Columbus Day parade today, resulted in the latter organization withdrawing from the line.

According to the parade roster, the members of the Legion post were to have had the seventh position, with the State Guard in eighth. Parade officials reversed the position.

The refusal was made to the commanding officer of the State Guard by Dr. Joseph Santosuosso, a member of the Italian parade committee. At the suggestion of the commanding officer the State Guard withdrew from the line.

The committee, in making the change, stated that an unarmed body canscuh as the members of the American Legion would be following an organisation carrying arms. The controversy delayed the start of the parade for over half an hour.

Forming at Hanover and Commercial streets, the prade wound its way through the downtown thoroughfares, which were thronged with spectators, with fully 10,000 men and women in line.

SHOW PICTURES OF MURDER SCENES

Photographer and Undertaker Witnesses at Trial of George A. Long

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 13.—When pictures of the nude murdered body of Mrs. Lucinda A. Broadwell were exhibited in the Washington County Courthouse here today, George A. Long, accused of her murder, scrutinized them without a tremor.

Long, alias Wrath, sat to all appearances unmoved glancing over the crowded courtroom where aged women and young girls capped their ears lest some bit of the gruesome testimony should escape them.

The element of horror so largely present in the case, due to the peculiar barbarity of the manner in which it was committed, did not appear to trouble them. Two gray-haired grandmotherly looking ladies plied their knitting needles throughout the session. Many girls and small boys were also present.

UNDERTAKER ON STAND.

The greater part of the day was occupied by the examination of witnesses who had been connected with the happenings immediately after the tragedy which left Harry E. Broadwell a widower and his three little children motherless. The discovery of the body, the taking of photographs of it, and the subsequent visit to undertaking rooms of Glenn Perry were the subjects to which most of the testimony pertained.

The first witness called was Undertaker Perry, who had charge of Broadwell's body after it had been found in the Wheelock garden, Barre, on Sunday morning, May 4.

A brief direct re-examination was conducted by Attorney General Frank C. Archibald, after which Attorney A. R. Dunn of counsel for the defendant the witness exhaustively questioned the witness relative to his position of the body, the articles of clothing found, and other circumstances relative to the removal of Mrs. Broadwell's remains.

IDENTIFIED BY THE BODY.

Perry testified that to his knowledge he was the first to identify the murdered woman. He stated that he was acquainted with Mrs. Broadwell for approximately two years, but that he did not recognize the body as here until after he had been put his undertaking apartments half an hour.

Perry told of being called by telephone about 9:45 o'clock on May 5. A man named O'Connor from the city of the chief of police had, he stated, been the one to call him, notifying him that a body had been found, and that the authorities desired him to take charge of it.

When he reached the scene, a crowd had gathered and several police officials were present. Broadwell's body was covered by a coat, thrown over it after its discovery. The garments of the dead woman lay in a heap. Her hands were secured behind her back by a white garment, and another garment had been tied tightly about her neck, causing strangulation.

Fred Eaton, a photographer, of Barre, was next called to the witness stand. He testified as to the taking of several photographs of the body of Mrs. Broadwell and other views connected with the evidence.

A letter from King George in which he declared that "A war victory was insufficient," was also read.

"Nothing is more essential than a strong enduring league of nations," said the King. "Every day that passes makes this clearer. The strength of the league depends upon the earnestness and sincerity of the popular support."

"There is an international atmosphere of disquiet and new hostilities are contemplated, while the old are still going on," said former Premier H. H. Asquith in a letter to the meeting. "The future of civilisation is hanging in the balance. This opportunity may not occur again."

While riding on an elevated train they awoke at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, to find that their handbags, containing what little money they had and their return tickets, had been stolen.

This was the story the girls told Lieutenant Michael O'Connor when they walked into the East One Hundred and Twenty-eighth street station today and asked him to lend them $50 with which to purchase railroad tickets back home. They said their parents would repay the lieutenant.

After they had been given breakfast, the police placed them in charge of the Children's Society, to be cared for until the arrival of their parents.

Arriving in the city penniless, the girls said they spent all day yesterday at the Grand Central terminal, and that a friendly policeman had given them money with which to purchase food.

Thousands of Tons of Food Rot as Result of Workers' Walkout

New York, Oct. 13.—With harbor traffic paralyzed and the city partly isolated and threatened with a dangerous food and fuel famine as a result of the marine strike and the various railroad, truck, railroad, port and terminal workers at a meeting in Jersey City today are reported to have voted not to resume work until their demands for higher wages are met.

Definite action by the striking longshoremen is expected at a mass meeting in this city tonight. The estimation has been aggravated by the strike of 11,000 chauffeurs, teamsters and stablemen of the American Railway Express Company.

Already hundreds of thousands of tons of food have started to rot because it cannot be moved, and more than 180,000 men have been made idle directly or indirectly through the strikes.

New Bedford, Oct. 13 —Safely ensconced in a cave in the woods three miles north of this city, seven-year-old George Selley, one of seven missing children, was found by Boy Scouts today.

Young Selley, who disappeared from his home, No. 217 Phillips avenue, last Saturday, was well supplied with provisions, which he had purchased with money that he had saved.

Carrying groceries in a sack, the boy went to a cave near the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad tracks, where he was found today. He was not desirous of being taken home and wished that people would let him alone.

No trace of the other six children has been found, although the Boy Scouts have been combing the woods for three days. The children, four boys and two girls, are believed by the police to have been actuated by the motive to which the Selley boy confessed, that of living a wild life, free of bothersome parents and school teachers.

Young Selley told the police that he decided to run away following the example of David Gerstein, seven years, who disappeared from his home a week ago Saturday. He said that he wished to be a hermit.

Two of the children, and sisters, are Frances Clera, sixteen, of No. 282½ North Front street, and Melinda Varney, sixteen, of No. 105 Collette street.

PLANNED TO SHELVE KAISER

Von Tirpitz Tells of Effort to Put Hindenburg in Command

VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS
BY ALFRED VON TIRPITZ
Grand Admiral of the German Navy
Diary Continued

Charlieville, March 8, 1915.—Yesterday the Rumanians turned obstinate again. We had begun to think that they would allow munitions to pass. The lack of munitions is the only drawback to the Turkish situation.

Meanwhile money is pouring into the hands of those rascals from both sides. The absolute certainty of victory which the British have trumpeted to the whole world as opposed to our dreadful doubt of our own ability causes the entire neutral world to believe in England.

I told you already about the Munich paper and the article about Belgium and the necessity of frankly stating what the government intends to do with it. Now the paper has been suppressed, by Bethmann's orders of course.

Today I spoke about it to the Bavarian military plenipotentiary who was on his way to the front. He had read it and thoroughly agreed with it. It was really an inferior paper, but the article was excellent and obviously written by an authority. He intimated that perhaps the article had been inspired in Bavaria. There is much opposition to the Chancellor's policies there. Bethmann Rimsell fears Bavaria has aspirations to become a modern Burgundy.

There may be something to it. The King of Bavaria, speaking about the annexation of Belgium, said to me in Explain:

"And if Prussia does not want it, we'll take it."

Charlieville, March 13, 1915.—You know now that the U-30 is lost. We are sorry and about it. The submarine traps that the English have laid down everywhere are very dangerous and all the French and English torpedo boats are hunting our submarines. They can't be helped. We must hold out.

• • •

Charlieville, March 12, 1915.—The setting off of Germany must in the long run make an impression on the minds of men and there is no telling when one of the vultures down there in the Balkans will strike at us. There is nothing to be done with the Austrians.

INADEQUATE PREPARATION.

The diplomatic preparations for the world war were incredibly inadequate and poor. Many of the ambassadors were of no use, neither were the envoys. Probably before the war the government never consulted with the military departments. There was blind confidence to the last in England's neutrality and since 1909 no increase in the naval budget.

(Editor's Note: Tirpitz made a conscious admission that Germany was for a long time preparing for a world war and expected it.)

In the army administration there was never understanding of England's importance in war. On the other hand, there was absolute trust in a victory to be gained by a defunct recipe.

Charlieville, March 14, 1915.—General von Einem's belief that the French could not hold out against us in open battle is a thing of the past. On the contrary, the French are excellent in their use of terrain, very free from dogmatic tactical teaching, and their guns hit the mark splendidly.

(Editor's Note: General Karl von Einem, attached to the general staff and director of the Prussian military headquarters at Potsdam.)

Today the Crown Prince announced himself. His father was absent. This time I expressed myself more freely to him. He was more serious than usual and spoke bitterly of the Chancellor's administration and the Cabinet.

The Dutch refuse us everything from fear. The Americans will not even give our cruisers coal, but furnish our enemies with weapons for hundreds of millions.

Charlieville, March 17, 1915.—The Foreign Office thought it had a hold on England and could hoodwink her. It still believes this.

We ought and could have avoided a war with Russia. What did it matter if in future years Turkey could go to Russia. We would have been rid of her. Instead of allowing that we have taken up the cudgel for Austria and see what it has brought us to.

SCHEMED TO SHELVE KAISER.

I only see one way out. The Emperor must report himself ill for the next eight weeks or longer. Hindenburg must replace Bethmann and take control of everything—army and navy. For the present the Emperor should go to Berlin. Everyone is shocked at him and his state of health.

Kessel (former military governor of Berlin, thinks the King of Bavaria should persuade him to report himself ill for a time. I was against this plan. If it can be done at all it must be of his own free will by the help of the Empress' surgeon or the physician in ordinary to his majesty. One of them must declare it necessary from a medical point of view or he will never go on a furlough.

With regard to Hindenburg there are drawbacks, for instance the Emperor cannot bear his auxiliary, Lyndendorff. It seems to me that only with the help of a complete breakdown can a change come, and then it will be too late.

(Editor's note: At this time Lyndendorff, who was second in command to Hindenburg on the eastern front, was Hitle known in Germany, and not in touch with the dominant military caste.)

Charlieville, March 29, 1915.—The Crown Prince has written to his father begging him to abolish the restrictions on submarines, which are the cause of our losing so many.

My surgeon general tells me that the Emperor actually prays for deliverance from the responsibility which is upon him, but he continually runs into the wall of egotism which those about him have built.

Charlieville, March 31, 1914.—Goltz Pascha (Field Marshal Kolmar von der Goltz, commander of the German-Turkish army) is here. I have not yet seen him but I understand his mission is to urge the taking of the Bosphorus corner. I have spoken to a courier first lieutenant who left Constantinople on the nineteenth. He believes the issue of the war now turns on the Dardanelles and Serbia. Bachmann and I are of the same opinion.

Further news that the Austrians are not holding out. The courier says that there are plenty of officers in the rear formations of the Austrian army but very few in the front. Very often the Austrian captain carrying at our sending the sons of good families into the army. Added to this are terrible dissensions and desertions.

Our general staff only now begins to realize this state of affairs. The courier wished to report to the Emperor in person but Plessen forbade it. It would not be very agreeable to his majesty to hear any more unpleasant news from Turkey or Austria just now.

Charlieville, April 2, 1915.—Today being Good Friday I went to church. After church parade without music, which the Emperor did not like, I was strolling to Flanders, Hamburg and Berlin on account of the U-boats. We then spoke of the U-boat warfare and I took the opportunity to tell him that in order to spare what had proved a great danger for the U-boats. They are easily rammed upon rising to the surface. The Emperor went at once to Bachmann to instruct him accordingly.

Prince Bitel has the most influence with the Emperor, but he is too much of a plain soldier.

KAISER CONSENTS.

Charlieville, April 3, 1915.—The Emperor has really given way and allows an absolutely free hand to the U-boats. The submarine warfare has been very effective. English trade has greatly declined since February 18, about 20 per cent. So with Scandinavia and Holland. Insurance premiums have risen enormously, also the price of food and wages in England. That is something to be thankful for.

Charlieville, April 12, 1915.—Spent yesterday in Hemay, the headquarters of the Crown Prince. He said, "Here we can talk comfortably because we are both the objects of suspicion."

Prince Henry was there also. He said to the Crown Prince that there always had been decay in the state and that there always would be. We had been so in his grandfather's and his father's day, and it would be the same when he came to the throne.

The Crown Prince said that to see the matter rightly, one must consider the men that surrounded his father. Prince Henry said that the Crown Prince would choose just such men in his turn, whereupon the latter said, "No, that I shall not do."

A great mistake has been made in forbidding an official statement of our war aims. We might have said that our aim was never again to permit such an aggressive consciency of England. Belgium is a menace against us. That would still have left our hands free. The Chancellor's policy of disparagement is foolish.

Continued Tomorrow.

In the next instalment: Small U-boats run aground. Chancellor wants to annex Courland instead of Belgium. Intrigue against third Lusitania note from United States and calls America "impudent." Urged stand against United States. Services to commemorate beginning of war. Sought to use Belgium in bargaining over peace terms. Bethmann refused to take responsibility of defying United States.

Scheme Was to Have Emperor Feign Illness for Eight Weeks newspaper and transmitting military information to the enemy.

Last evening the British Admiralty made known that they had reason to believe the U-29 had gone down in the Irish Sea, with the entire crew. They would not make such an announcement without good reason and the U-29 is overdue. It would be too terribly sad. Perhaps Weddigen felt too secure or he may have been lost as the result of the precautions it seems we must take to safeguard neutrals.

(Editor's Note: Captain-Lieutenant Otto von Weddigen, commander of the submarine U-9 and later the U-29, was the idol of the German navy. He torpedoed and sank the British warships Hogue, Aboukir and Cressy September 22, 1914, off the Hook of Holland, and up to the time of which Von Tirpitz writes had fourteen other ships to his credit, including the British warship Hawke. The Kaiser bestowed on him the highest German decoration, Pour le Merite.

In Turkey everything is on the point of breaking down. We shall come the Balkan flood and the vultures will descend upon Austria.

WAVE OF GRAFT SWEEPS ALL GERMANY

Chancellor Bauer Declares Government Must Wipe Out Spread of Evil

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Special Correspondent.

Berlin, Oct. 13.—"Graft and corruption, which are among the destructive heritages of the war, continue in full bloom in Germany, and show no signs of decreasing."

Chancellor Bauer said this in a speech before the National Assembly, in which he outlined the government's program of wiping out these evils which form one of the most striking phenomena of the revolution and present people of which cannot be exaggerated. Herr Bauer said:

"Nearly everything still has its price. It is a moral disease which must be combatted in every strata. Every means must be mercilessly employed, regardless of the station of the culprits."

A "MORAL SICKNESS."

The Premier declared it especially necessary to prevent the spread of this "moral sickness" in the minor officialdom, which in Germany has been hitherto proverbially proof against corruption.

For the first time in Germany's history, a Socialist Chancellor, whose predecessors ruled from secretary of a trades union to the head of the government, spoke in the Reichstag building from the very place in which Bismarck, Hohenlohe, Caprivie, Von Bulow, Michaelis and Bethmann-Hollweg stood.

REINFORCED MINISTRY.

Herr Bauer on this occasion presented a reshuffled and reinforced ministry. Instead of a black-red government made up exclusively of Social Democrats and Centrists, there is now one fortified by Democrats whose color is gold.

As was exclusively foreshadowed in these dispatches some time ago, the Democratic Party has left the government in protest against the signing of the Peace Treaty, have been asked to come back to the fold and have accepted the invitation.

Incidentally, Bauer declared the elections to the Constitutional Assembly that were scheduled for late this year could hardly be held before Spring. There is a well grounded fear that if they were held now the Social Democrats would lose probably sixty seats to the Independents, and a considerable part of the Democratic strength would swing to the Nationalists, thus upsetting the present government.

"SLANDERING" AT WORK.

The Premier expressed regret that "busy slandering is still at work outside the German borders, directed against Germany and the German people." He vehemently attacked the reactionary Nationalist parties of the Right. He said he would push over their hysteric cries for revenge, but he could not forego denouncing them for making utterances in the guise of patriotism which were placing further weapons in the hands of the allies against the Georman people.

He summed up the government's program thus:

"Our aim is a peaceful building up of a reconciliation of the people as against the consciencless chauvinistic poisoners of the mind."

CALLS NOCTURNAL PHONOGRAPH NUISANCE

Chamberburgh, Pa., Oct. 13.—Alleging that despite his protests and requests Mrs. Hazel Kramer persists in playing her phonograph at all hours of the night, Harry Schuchman, of this place, has brought a prosecution against the woman for maintaining a nuisance.

Schuchman charges that Mrs. Kramer frequently plays the phonograph and that dancing in her apartment until 2 o'clock in the morning, thereby causing himself and his family much annoyance and loss of sleep.

TAFT ADMITS HE IS NOT BUILT FOR PLANES

Pana, Ill., Oct. 13.—Former President William Howard Taft admits he was not built for aeroplanes. When asked to take a ride while lecturing at a "chautauqua" here, he said:

"No, I was not built for an aeroplane."

A few minutes before Mr. Taft had said "yes" to an invitation to ride, "but," using his own expression, "I thought you said we were going for a spin in an automobile."

SOLDIERS DEVELOP TASTE FOR SWEET POTATOES

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 13.—Stating that he could dispose of at least fifty cars of Georgia sweet potatoes, Arthur B. Lowe, a Sioux City, Iowa, commission man, has written to the Georgia Market Bureau asking information regarding the shipping of sweet potatoes. The demand, he states Mr. Lowe, from soldiers who learned to like these tubers while in the army is great.

STYLISH GIRLS INSULTED; POLICE WAR ON MASHERS

Canton, O., Oct. 12.—Because a girl dresses stylishly, it is no reason she should be insulted.

Chief of Police Riblet has declared war on mashers. "There are many pretty girls in Canton who dress stylishly," says the chief, "and I am going to see that they are protected from insult."

THRESHING MACHINE CUTS OFF HORSE'S TAIL

Pleasant Hill, Mo., Oct. 13.—A horse belonging to Charles Powell, a farmer near here, was the victim of a painful and rather unusual accident. The horse, while standing near a threshing machine going full blast, switched its tail into the machine and the wheel twisted it off in a few seconds.

ENGLAND ACTS TO STAMP OUT PROFITEERING

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Oct. 13.—Food profiteering is being stamped out in England. The fight, which has been waged for several years, is growing more and more determined. Where there are legal lacks or obstacles Parliament straightway is given a prod, and there quickly issues forth necessary legal powers to cope with the profiteers.

The chief aim of the Food Ministry has been to eliminate the food speculator. Unless a person has been a recognized dealer in foodstuffs he is not allowed to do business. When the armistice was signed certain powers of the Food Ministry were curtailed; prices rose; now the ministry is getting back its former power, while Parliament is putting through a drastic anti-profiteering measure.

Maximum price selling by the Ministry of Food on staple foodstuffs, with graduated allowances to certain portions of the trade—the importer, wholesaler and retailer—has been the chief means of preventing even higher prices than those which rule today. Quantity buying by the government, which acted as importer of certain necessities, also has tended to keep prices somewhat lower here than in other European countries.

"While checking profiteering has been our aim," said Mr. Croxton Smith, of the Food Ministry, "it has been impossible to fix a price to the public which will give the small retailer a proper remuneration for capital outlay and labor and at the same time not afford excessive profit to the large multiple shops which are operated far more efficiently. In most foodstuffs the Ministry has fixed the profit at every stage from the importer or the producer to the public. In several trades we have adopted the system of licensing and forbidding anyone else to operate.

LICENSING SYSTEM.

"The licensing system has brought good results. We only recognized people who had become known as actual bona-fide food dealers. These included importers, wholesalers, secondary wholesalers and the retailer.

"That eliminated the speculator who simply came in for a gamble. He can no longer operate.

"As regards maximum prices, the Food Controller is always impressing on people that such prices are maximum and not fixed prices and that where supplies are in abundance the cost to the consumer should frequently be well below the maximum price. For example, apples are ninepence a pound, maximum price, but in many parts of the country they are selling for four or five pence a pound owing to large local supplies."

Mr. Smith explained how the Food Ministry was operated.

"Although it would be impossible for all the petty administrative details to be carried out from headquarters except by employing an unwieldy staff, the country was divided into sixteen divisions, with a divisional food commissioner at the head of each.

COMMITTEES APPOINTED.

In each division food control committees were appointed corresponding to the ordinary local government units. There are nearly 2,000 local food committees, to whom is entrusted in a very large measure the administration of the various orders made from headquarters. If the local committees get into difficulties they appeal to the divisional food commissioner, who, if necessary, reports to the Food Ministry. The food committees are entrusted with power in many cases of varying the food controller's maximum prices downward according to local circumstances.

"The Defence of the Realm Act enables us to inflict a maximum penalty of £100 (500) fine and six months in prison for each violation of any food order.

"There is now a further act of Parliament whereby anyone who makes an illegal profit can be made to disgorge the whole amount, as well as suffer a penalty upon the sense will have another conception drilled into him through his military training, making swearing a wasted effort not an essential one in getting results.

"The man sworn at in the future in the army may be the one who has a good excuse for not obeying."

Boys Electrocute Bull

SEES DOOM OF SWEARING IN U. S. ARMY

General Ruckman Believes New Vocational Training Will Put Habit to Rout

Brigadier-General John W. Ruckman, commanding the North Atlantic coast artillery district, believes with Rector William H. van Allen of the Church of the Advent, that there is very little occasion for swearing in the army and calls it only a habit which the vocational training now being put into operation by the War Department may correct in the near future.

"This old idea that you've got to swear at men in the army in order to get anything out of them is now exploded," remarked the general.

"What Dr. van Allen says about the doughboys overseas is to be regretted because swearing, in my opinion, shows itself to be a mere habit and may prove inefficiency in the end.

"To be constantly ripping out oaths to get discipline is a poor way to encourage it. Granting that there may be occasions when a leader of men may resort to swearing suddenly to arouse particular action and be excused for this warm effusion of words, I believe it will always indicate a lower degree of discipline if an officer resorts to swearing to get results from his men.

"I suppose this is why the army who obeys its talk without resting upon an oath to rule their men. Such an officer has taught his men by his actions that he is not in earnest until he swears at them; a grave mistake.

"Such discipline is to be regretted and can never be commended.

Nothing can excuse swearing at men.

"In the new vocational training of men for the army, I believe you will see a great change in this respect.

Swearing is a habit. That's all it is. When a man gets too attached to it in order to have his orders carried out, he will eventually prove himself a weakling in discipline. If he depends upon it, because the new officer is not relying upon the sense will have another conception drilled into him through his military training, making swearing a wasted effort not an essential one in getting results.

"The man sworn at in the future in the army may be the one who has a good excuse for not obeying."

FRESH DRIVE IN WAR ON THE PROFITEER

Five Government Departments and Agencies Are Asked to Assist Palmer

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 12.—The government's campaign against the high cost of living received additional impetus today when the active aid of five more government departments and agencies in the battle against the profiteer was sought by Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer.

With a view of securing their co-operation and that of their departments, the Attorney-General today held a conference at the Department of Justice with Secretary of the Treasury Carter Glass, Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture David F. Houston, Director-General of Railroads Walker D. Hines and Acting Chairman Victor Murdock of the Federal Trade Commission.

The Department of Justice was represented further at the conference by Judge C. S. Ames, in charge of anti-trust cases for the department.

Endicott Helps Out Policeman With Six Children

Henry B. Endicott, the wealthy shoe manufacturer and fixer of labor troubles, probably would not confirm this story.

Mr. Endicott's modesty might make him disclaim it. But it's true, so here it is.

Florence F. O'Donoghue of No. 12a Edson street, Dorchester, one of the striking policemen, has a family of six small children, one a crippled girl on crutches. To add to his troubles, he is carrying a mortgage on his home.

To increase the pay he was receiving as a policeman he secured outside work. This meant that three days a week for eight months he worked twenty-four hours a day. He didn't mind that, as the extra money was a great aid in clothing and feeding his children.

But one of his children had trouble with a neighbor's child. A report of O'Donoghue's outside activities found its way to police headquarters.

VIOLATED POLICE RULES.

It's a violation of police rules for an officer to engage in outside work. Many of them have—strikers and non-strikers—and have never been punished.

O'Donoghue, however, was summoned before a trial board, found guilty and sentenced to 170 hours' extra duty without pay. O'Donoghue, of course, lost his extra work. Then came the strike and the meeting of the Mayor's committee of thirty-four.

Philip Corbett, an officer of the police union, cited O'Donoghue's case as a sample of the hard time some of the policemen had to make both ends meet, and of Commissioner Curtis' attitude in dealing with the case.

Mr. Endicott became interested in the case. He offered to loan O'Donoghue some money to help him tide over his financial troubles. He also offered to assume the mortgage on O'Donoghue's home.

FREE OF INTEREST.

O'Donoghue appreciated Mr. Endicott's offer to give him money, but refused to accept it other than as a loan. In consequence Mr. Endicott now holds a note bearing no interest and without date, signed by Florence F. O'Donoghue.

O'Donoghue until the strike had been in the police department nine years, most of the time at the Back Bay station.

Of the six children in the family the youngest is one year and the oldest thirteen. The second oldest of the children is a little girl who has been on crutches for seven years.

After the strike was called O'Donoghue sought work, but was refused employment in many places because of his being a striking policeman. He is now working as a watchman in a downtown building.

CHARGE GUARDS BEAT LEGLESS VETERAN

Charging that he was the victim of a terrible beating by State Guardsmen and that he was without medical treatment for nineteen hours, Theodore J. McNally, a legless Spanish War veteran, declared today that he would take legal action against the men.

McNally, who is on bail on a charge of drunkenness, to which he pleaded not guilty, told his story to the American. State Guard officers said they had no record of the case, while the police were equally reticent.

The man lives at No. 17 Common street, South End, and is thirty-nine. He has two honorable discharges from the United States Army and claimed that he lost his legs as a result of gangrene poisoning contracted in the Spanish War.

The right leg was amputated at the hip, and the left at the knee, on which McNally wears a peculiarly-constructed shoe. He gets about with the aid of two short crutches.

TOLD TO MOVE ALONG.

"Last Tuesday night at 7:45," said McNally. "I was on my way home. On Broadway, South End, I stopped to rest as my knees was sore. I was perfectly sober. While sitting on the sidewalk, resting, two State guardsmen approached me. One of them said: 'Get up and get out of here.' The other said: 'Stay where you are.'

"I started to get up, when the first man struck me in the chest with the butt of his piece. I fell up against a door and put out my left hand to protect myself. The man then swung his butt, striking me on the head, which was split open. I was stunned and fell over on my face. Then one of the men either hit me with a rifle or kicked me in the spine.

CLUBBED UNCONSCIOUS.

"I attempted to rise, but the other guardsman struck me on the head with a club three times and I became unconscious.

"When I regained consciousness, after a short time, they dragged me to the Lagrange street police station and locked me in a cell. I was there all night, and although I called frequently for help I got none. Once a volunteer policeman, a big six-footer, wearing a light suit, came to the cell door and spat in my face. Then he went away.

"While the guards were heating me up on Broadway a woman came to the door of a nearby house and protested. They told her to get in the house and mind her business or they would get her.

THROWN IN A POLICE VAN.

"At the station house I was hooked as a drunk, but in the morning, when they came around with a release for me to sign, I refused. I was then thrown into the van with a number of other prisoners and taken to the city prison. At 2 o'clock Wednesday I was arraigned before Judge Creed, pleaded not guilty and my case was continued until tomorrow.

"From court I was taken to the Charles Street Jail, where Dr. Colburn gave me the first medical assistance I had received. I was then bailed out.

NO REPORT ON CASE.

"Tomorrow, through my lawyer, I will bring John Doe proceedings against these guardsmen. I think I know their names, but am not sure."

Deputy Sheriff John J. Casey told the American that McNally had arrived at Charles Street Jail he was "in a pitiful condition." He said that the man had received no medical treatment up to that time.

At State Guard Divisional Headquarters it was said that there was no report on the incident. The police said there was nothing on the blotter of Station 4. They said McNally had a record for drunkenness.

BOTH POISONED CHILDREN TO RECOVER

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Edna, aged five, and Sherley Lulkart, aged seven, aided by Dr. Thomas A. Carter, are going to win their fight against death by poisoning, a fight waged continuously in the Columbus Hospital since their mother, Mrs. Ida Lulkart, gave them capsules of bichloride of mercury several days ago at their home in Detroit, Mich.

Dr. Carter made this announcement today:

"Edna will be entirely well within a few days," said Dr. Carter, "Sherley shows marked improvement, and unless internal hemorrhages occur will recover."

Encouraged by this—the first positive assurance that his children would recover—Emil Lulkart, their father, today began preparations for taking his children to their home in Detroit.

At the same time Detroit began preparations for a municipal reception for the children when they return to that city after one of the most remarkable battles against what the medical world has heretofore considered "hopeless odds."

Mayor Couzens has taken charge of the welcome home arrangements, and is it expected that half a million people will participate in a municipal greeting.

While these joyful preparations were going on in Chicago the Detroit-Michigan authorities were preparing to take the mother to the Michigan State Insane asylum at Iona. She was adjudged insane Saturday and was taken to the State institution today.

Lulkart, while overjoyed at the recovery, has not, however, forgotten his wife and is aiding relatives of the unfortunate mother in their efforts to make her "as comfortable as possible."

"In view of the wonderful recovery of my children my interests are naturally turned toward the other sufferer in my family," he said today. "Anything I can do to reassure her or to help in the improvement in her mental condition, I certainly will do."

CURFEW LAW IS APPLIED IN IRELAND

Fear of Fresh Revolts Leads British to Prescribe Rigid Discipline

Dublin, Oct. 13.—Four hundred members of the Irish Constabulary broke up a Sinn Fein meeting attended by 10,000 persons at Hallinstog, it has just been learned here. Troops armed with rifles and grenades were held in reserve. Several casualties resulted from a skirmish between the crowd and the constabulary.

Three priests were among those participating in the miniature battle.

Dublin, Oct. 13.—The government's intention to deal in the most drastic manner with Ireland because further outcroppings of the spirit of revolt are feared again was indicated when an order in council became known applying the curfew law to Ireland.

It also provides that in any area prescribed by the Defence of the Realm Act the military or naval authority may order all within specified districts to remain indoors between any hours directed, and may also establish a system of permits by the authorities for persons whose business requires them to be out after curfew.

This order parallels the rule enforced by the Germans in Belgium requiring inhabitants to remain indoors at night. Supporting this, a London dispatch indicates the government fears trouble during the coming long Winter nights.

At the chief secretary's office here it was declared today that since May 1 there have occurred 1293 "outrages," including sixteen murders, fourteen victims being soldiers, policemen or officials; fifty-four cases of shooting at persons, and 478 raids, all of which "outrages" are officially attributed to the Sinn Fein movement.

Walter Long's ministerial committee entrusted with the framing of a new home rule act will resume its sessions today. It is reported that all of Ulster, not only the six North-eastern counties, will be included in the special treatment which it is proposed to give the Northern provinces.

HOPE TO REACH FUND GOAL THIS WEEK

Youth Whose Grandfather Was Harvard Man Sends $1,000 Subscription

Voluntary subscriptions from persons who never attended Harvard University, or who were identified with the institution for a brief period, have surprised the Harvard Endowment Fund Committee, and encourage the belief that the total amount desired, $15,250,000, will be in sight before the close of the present week.

One outsider, who subscribed $100, admitted that he attended the Summer school for a single term.

A young man still in the preparatory school sent in a subscription for $1,000, stating that his grandfather was a Harvard man and that he hoped to be one before the end of the year.

When the fund was opened it was estimated that there were 38,000 Harvard men in the United States, but the committee believes that with these "near" Harvard men coming forward with subscriptions it must revise its figures.

STEEL STRIKERS HOPE TO CURB STATE POLICE

Leaders Keep up Fight to Have Ban Lifted on Meetings of Workers

By International News Service.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 13.—The fourth week of the steel strike in this district started today with practically no change in operating conditions. Although many mills had small forces, all resumed work.

Following the visit of five members of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, the strikers' leaders were preparing to press their suits to lift the ban on strikers' meetings. Attorney W. H. Rubin of the strikers' committee also intimated that action might be taken against activities of the State police.

The Senate probers returned to Washington convinced that Americanization of the foreign element would go a long ways toward allaying the industrial unrest. During the hearings here the investigators frequently expressed amazement and concern over the high proportion of unassimilated aliens among the workers.

Senator Walsh suggested that there should be a law compelling immigrants to learn English within five years, under penalty of the law.

Whether the senators will return here to continue the hearings is uncertain. Senator Kenyon said the question would be determined in Washington this week.

"No Peace Unless Ireland Is Free," Says Prelate

Melbourne, Australia, Oct. 13.—Archbishop Mannitn said in a speech here that he had no confidence in the English ministerial committee appointed to solve the Irish question.

He expressed the hope that the Irish convention in November "will give Lloyd George and his associates something to think about."

"If its voice is not heeded," the archbishop added, "the Irish in Australia will not consent to peace until justice is done in Ireland."

FAMOUS BOAT BUILDER THROWN FROM WAGON

Mr. Bigelow is the leading designer and builder of racing craft on the Cape, his twenty-one-footers built for members of the Beverly Yacht Club in recent years rivaling the best of the productions of Nat Herreshoff at Bristol, R. I., where Mr. Bigelow was a prized workman years ago before he located here.

ITALIAN FLEET WILL SUPPORT D'ANNUNZIO

Officers Pour Into Fiume—Two Million Lire Raised for Poet's Campaign

Paris, Oct. 13.—"An important personage just arriving here from Rome" is quoted by the Exchange Telegraph as stating the position of the Nitti government is critical.

Gabriele D'Annunzio refuses to evacuate Fiume regardless of the pleadings of some of his best friends. The Italian fleet, it is thought, will side with D'Annunzio in case of warlike action.

Premier Nitti no longer enjoys the great authority he had, and the King is "hesitating," while behind the scenes the Socialists are watching, saying they alone can settle the question.

"A mighty storm broods over the kingdom," the agency's informant said. "Officers are steadily pouring in at Fiume and are awaiting D'Annunzio's order, despising those of the War Minister."

Two million lire have been subscribed by the population for D'Annunzio. A further large concentration of Italian troops on the Jugo-Slav frontier is reported traveling toward San Pisco.

VETERANS OF ROSLINDALE WELCOMED

Parade, Presentation of Colors to Legion and Sports Features of Day's Program

All Roslindale joined in the Welcome Home celebration to some 900 overseas veterans today. The day opened with a salute of twenty-one guns on Pierce Field. A troop of 150 State Guardsmen acted as an escort to the World War, Spanish War and Civil War veterans.

Fourteen floats were in line, representing the efforts of different local organizations, among them being the Roslindale Community Club, Knights of Columbus, Odd Fellows and Masons. James F. Mohan was chief marshal.

At noon luncheon was served at the parish house of the Church of Our Saviour. Following this on Pierce Field, a stand of colors was presented to Irving W. Adams Post of the American Legion by Colonel John F. J. Herbert, Lieutenant-Governor Cox was the principal speaker.

Athletic events took up the remainder of the afternoon. Ernest B. Gardiner presided. Singing by school children followed.

The men, Fred E. Spinney and Alfred J. Parker, both of Malden, were held only on a technical charge of drunkenness, although an investigation is being made.

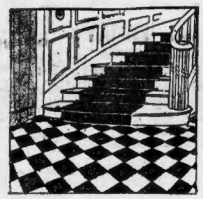
Reaffirming Our Jordan Marsh Company Linoleum Statements

The Federal Trade Commission has defined Linoleum "as a floor covering composed of oxidized oil and gums intimately mixed with ground cork or wood flour, pressed on a suitable fabric back."



Thus with one stroke they dispose of the many imitations suggestive of the name Linoleum now being offered for sale in one form or other.

This definition we always have clearly defined to the public in order that the question of relative prices and values might be clearly appreciated.

We now emphasize the fact, stronger than ever, that our Linoleums are guaranteed to meet, part for part, the constituents defined by the Federal Trade Commission.

Coupled with the further fact that during the month manufacturers have substantially raised the price of Linoleum, it is a most opportune time to purchase Genuine Linoleums at our present quotations.

Our complete selections have not advanced in price, but remain at the same low levels for present thrifty purchasers.

HARVARD TEAM OFF FORM

Coach Fisher Not Satisfied With the Playing of His Outfit

The Harvard football team is due for a tongue lashing when the men gather around Coach Bob Fisher tomorrow afternoon in the locker building on Soldiers Field. The Crimson head coach and his associates were highly displeased at the general play of their team against Colby. The only bright passage of the whole game, to their way of thinking, was the forward passing in the last half. But they temper their delight in the success of the long aerials by pointing out the weak opposition the visiting backs offered to the basketball chucks.

Individually a number of the Harvard eleven played fine football, but as a unit the team was in a slow moving mood, especially behind the line. The interference offered the backs is still far from what it should be at this time of the season. And the first string runners had their trouble in the initial periods chiefly through the unsettled quarterback play of Dick Humphrey, the young sophomore, who played in place of his captain, Billie Murray, who took the day off.

Humphrey is a fine running back. He possesses all the strong points of a successful halfback. But it is safe to say that his day behind the rush line as a signal caller is over, at least for this year.

Eddie Casey had another good day during the short time he was in the game. The Harvard football team, despite the material, would be lost without the former Exeter star behind the line.

Ralph Horween did Harvard's punting for a time while he was in, but once in a while Humphrey took a turn at it. Fred Church is also a good kicker, and may be the man to dislodge one of the present first string backs. Church captained and was the star of his freshman team. He is a deceptive runner, uses a good stiff arm, can punt and drop kick, and hold his end of the argument in passing.

Arthur Hamilton did his fair share of the line bucking in Saturday's game, and is commencing to look like a fixture at right half. There is plenty of chance for improvement in his defensive play, but he is new to the big game and will get better as the season progresses.

CLARK PLAYS WELL.

Arthur Clark played effectively Saturday at right guard, and Bob Sedgwick more than held his own alongside his team mate. Flake Brown did not play his game Saturday, and Charley Havemeyer at centre did not quite come up to expectation. Hubbard took some time to find himself, and then did fine work at tackle.

The wing pair, Joe Ryan and Jack Desmond, more than held up their end of the Harvard argument, and got down on field in good shape. Ryan recovered a fumble by Leroe of Colby on the latter's 17-yard line, which was soon turned into a Harvard touchdown. On the other hand, Don Jacobs circled him in the only long run the visiting team made. Both lads are at present well in the lead for their positions, but the wings, like John Crocker, Morty Phinney, Jack Gaston and Hi Faxon are developing fast, and all had a hand in the forward pass success on Saturday.

PLAYED CLOSE TO LINE.

The coaches declared that it was not so much the strength of the Crimson team as it was the weaknesses of their opponents that brought about the 33 to 0 score. The Colby backs played close to their line, and this was primarily responsible for the success that both Felton and Johnson had in throwing forward passes. With one exception the players received the relays without any opposition being within a yard of them. Faxon got a twenty-two-yard toss with Leroe at his elbow.

Today being a holiday the entire squad was excused from practice.

MALDEN HIGH CAPTURES FIRST SUBURBAN GAME

Malden High opened its Suburban season very successfully today by taking Brookline into camp by a 41 to 6 score. The Malden team ripped through the rival at will and had no trouble in protecting its own goal after the first few minutes.

Shortly after the whistle had blown Ball broke through for a long run and scored the only Brookline points of the game. The entire Malden backfield showed great attacking power and the line held well. To all appearances the veteran Malden outfit will be one of the leading contenders for the Suburban championship.

DORCHESTER ELEVEN BEATEN IN PROVIDENCE

Providence, R. I., Oct. 13.—Pawtuxet A. C. defeated the Dorchester A. A. semi-pro football team at Olneyville Gardens today, 6 to 0.

WHO IS THE YOUNGEST OLD-TIME GOLFER IN BOSTON?

Davy Brown (left), who once held the world's golf title, is a leading candidate for first honors as the youngest "old time" golfer around Boston. Three other "youngsters" (from left to right) who chase the pill to keep young are Charles Burgess, Leonard H. Rhodes and Edgar L. Rhodes, the latter well-known retail grocers.

Who is the youngest old-time golfer around Boston?

Much has been playing the ancient Scottish game the greatest number of years and is still a member of the Stay Young Club?

With a grandfathers' tournament at Springfield as a suggestion, the American sent a representative and camera man to Greater Boston links for "young" old golfers.

"Deacon" Davy Brown, appropriately a Scotchman, though not so old in years as many Greater Boston golfers, appears to have the honors for cracking them out into the fair green for years and years.

WON WORLD'S TITLE.

Davy once, long ago, won the championship of the world at the famous St. Andrews links in Scotland. And just to show he was still as good as ever he tied in the Massachusetts open at Pine Hills in 1909.

For the past few Summers the actors and men of wealth who frequent Crawford Notch up in the White Mountains Summers have been the Deacon's cronies. Dave Warfield, the actor, is one of the Deacon's most intimate cronies. Warfield claims the Deacon can shut his eyes and tell from the swish of the club its position in its swing towards the ball.

Take any golf course around Boston any good afternoon and there they are, going about over the turf with lively step and erect carriage, conscious of their youth and vigor. Numbered among them are many who are still active in business, while several others have but recently retired and are now enjoying a well-earned rest.

BEST BRAINS FOLLOW GAME.

Glancing over the list, one is reminded of the social register and it is indeed true that the ancient frolic of the Scots has drawn for its followers a goodly portion of the best brains of the city. All of the men, excepting David Brown, Irving W. Small, D. H. Walton of Brookline, proprietor of the chain of lunch rooms, and E. C. Lane of Brookline, well known in the shoe trade, whose names are in this story have been on earth sixty or more years.

A few float as high as seventy-two years, so it is up to you when you see your friends playing next time to try and ponder out just how young they are in years.

A reporter and camera man of the American made a trip out to the Woodland Golf Club at Auburndale and there found some of them keeping young. There were Thomas S. Baldwin of Allston, formerly in the hardware business, who has been playing golf for twenty-three years; Albert H. Beal of Brookline, who was in the tea and coffee business and has been at the game for the past ten years; and Harry B. Richmond of Allston, president of the Carpet Trade Golfers' Association of America, who has enjoyed the game for the last twenty years.

Then, too, there are the Rhodes brothers of Brookline, Leonard H. and Edgar L., easily recognized as the owners of the prosperous market first of that name. They play often and started about four years ago under the direction of Charlie Burgess, the genial professional teacher out there.

BUSINESS MEN CHASE PILL.

Other familiar figures around the links are Thomas H. Gray, former Harvard ball player and oarsman; L. B. Folsom of Wahan, practically founder of the club; Everett E. Bird of Newton Highlands, identified with the wool business; William H. Wilkinson of Newton, president of the hardware company bearing his name; Charles E. Edgar of Brookline, president of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company and Frederick A. Buttrick of Brookline, active in the telephone business.

Charles Whittemore of Newton, nationally famous for his shoe polishes, finds time to act as president of the company and have a game of golf, too. Then there is George Richardson of Brookline, known by a legion of friends as a furniture dealer; Michael Burke of Marlboro, the Causeway street liquor millionaire; George P. Steele of Brookline, and J. R. Jameson from the same town, a familiar figure in the banking district of Boston.

L. P. Brigham of Brookline, the former dry goods man, gets out his sticks and chases around the course. Some others working for the same end include Frederick Estabrook of Brookline who, sending out cigars under the firm name of Estabrook & Eaton, has delighted thousands of citizens in the Commonwealth. Frederick L. Wheeler of Roxbury and E. Frank in Folsom of Brookline.

Arthur W. Thayer of Dedham, who is active in the sugar business; Alfred H. Howard of Boston, one of the long-time members; Henry R. Hunnewell of Wellesley, who has devoted decades to the banking business, and E. S. Benedict of Brookline, a veteran member, flour merchant and connected with the Board of Trade, find time to get around, stretch their limbs and stay young.

OAKLEY BOYS SKILFUL.

Some others who feel that all work and no play makes "Jack a dull boy" are Arthur P. Cushing of Brookline, a prominent lawyer with offices in Boston; William P. Cushman, from the same place, and Joseph S. Sullivan of Boston.

At the Oakley Country Club, Watertown, one comes across Costello C. Conyers, of Brookline, Richard H. Dana of Cambridge, who married Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's daughter; S. Nathaniel Perkins of Boston, prominent in the wool trade; C. E. Aldrich of Boston and Andrew T. Keefe of Charlestown.

There, too, there is Judge Davis Fox of Cambridge, Dr. William S. Swan of the same city, Robert W. Willson of the University City, and J. G. Thorpe, who was runner-up in a national amateur championship and who has won a State championship.

Cambridge seems to have many "young" golfers, for Warren H. Locke, S. I. Eustis and Manning Emery all come from there. One also catches sight of A. Barr Comstock, Frank W. Whitcher, the well-known leather man, and H. Leland Chandler.

Charles Eustis Hubbard of Cambridge is an honorary member, and Major-General S. S. Sumner of Boston, U. S. A., retired, is an army member. A great many young women also support themselves on Oakley's Field.

The Wollaston Golf Club at Montclair has for its group of enthusiasts such well-known men as T. King of Quincy, George Wright of Boston, of Wright & Ditson; General Charles H. Taylor, proprietor of the Boston Globe; William N. Dayson of Boston, and James H. Stetson of Quincy.

On the grounds of the Belmont Spring Country Club at Belmont there there gather William A. Carr of Boston, auditor of the club; Charles L. Parker of Boston, and William H. Potter of Cambridge, former president of a prominent candy concern in that city.

SOURCE OF ETERNAL YOUTH.

George W. Bentley, Jr., the wholesale grocer and importer of Somerville, besides Charles H. Campbell of Malden, still active in the canning business, can be seen on the links.

Whoever would try to set forth an argument against golf must necessarily sit up many nights searching for material after looking through all the books on logic. Even then the fact that all those men are staying young is a victorious answer to all the arguments that might be presented.

So go get your set of clubs and join the Stay-Young Club, casting aside all books which say that they, and they alone, can tell the exact location of the Youthful Spring and the method of reaching its years-giving waters. Many golfers today say they would long ago have been laid to their patch of soil were it not for the good old game.

B. C. HIGH BEATS LATIN IN LAST MINUTE PLAY

Boston College High football team defeated the Boston Latin eleven this morning by a nine to three score. Boston College won in the last few minutes to play after they had held Latin on their one-foot line and punted out to Samuels, who fumbled. Joe O'Mara recovered the ball and ran for fifty yards for a touchdown, the only one of the game.

O'Mara also scored the other three points for his team by a drop kick in the third period. Latin's score came in the first few minutes of play. Malley kicking a field goal from the 20-yard line.

The game started with Boston College High receiving the kick. A gamble by B. C. and a successful forward, R. Doherty to Malley, brought the ball to the 10-yard line, but after three attempts to put it over Malley dropped back and scored his drop kick.

B. C. H. again received the kick-off and on line plays and one successful forward pass, brought the ball within scoring distance to fumble again. Poor passing by the centre was the cause of many losses for B. C. There was no more scoring in the first period.

Wilson and Farrell gained much ground in the second period, but once more fumbling kept them from scoring.

The second half opened with Latin School receiving. Doherty ran the ball to the middle of the field and Johnstone made ten through the line. A fumble gave B. C. H. the ball and two first downs and a forward brought it near enough for O'Mara to kick the goal that tied the score.

Boston Latin put up the best game in the last period when they ran the ball from the middle of the field to B. C. H. one-foot line, where they were held. Wilson punted to Samuels, who fumbled. O'Mara recovered and ran the length of the field.

INJURIES TO PLAYERS WEAKEN NAVY ELEVEN

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 12.—Accidents have already hit the Naval Academy eleven seriously. Captain Eddie Ewen has a sprained ankle, severe enough to put him on crutches and keep him from the game for two or three weeks.

Graves, the regular end on the other flank, has got been in shape for hard playing, but is improving and played part of the game Saturday. Severn, a valuable substitute last season and one of the most promising back-field candidates this year, has hurt his shoulder badly enough to probably keep him out of the game the whole season.

BOSTON COLLEGE SQUAD GIVEN WORKOUT

Coach Cavanaugh Is Confident Good Showing Will Be Made with Yale

Coach Cavanaugh of Boston College had his charges out on Alumni field today in preparation for the Yale game at New Haven Saturday.

The team came through Saturday's contest without any injuries and is ready for a tough week's work. Most of the regulars played only the first half of the game against Middlebury and showed a decided improvement over the game with Harvard. The backfield men gave good interference to the man carrying the ball and left their feet when necessary to put a man out of the play. This sort of work was conspicuous by its absence a week ago.

GUSTAFSON IS CAPTAIN OF PENN TRACK SQUAD

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.—Marvin Gustafson has been selected as leader of the University of Pennsylvania cinder path team this coming season. Creed Haymond was last year's captain.

Gustafson is the best middle distance runner at Penn, and is considered one of the best in collegiate ranks. His most notable achievement was in winning the 600-yard indoor national championship a few seasons ago. Last season in the intercollegiates he ran second to Mayer of Cornell in the 880.

Star Ring Men Clash in Bouts at Newark Club

New York, Oct. 12.—There will be thirty-eight rounds of boxing served to the fans at the Newark Sportsmen's Club in the First Regiment Armory in Newark tonight. Practically every class will be represented, except the middleweight. Heavyweights, lightweights, featherweights and bantamweights are on the program. In the heavyweight division, Al Roberts, of Staten Island, the knockout king who has become known as the "Babe Ruth of Boxing" because of his extraordinary record of seventeen knockouts in twenty battles, will meet Charlie Weinert, of Newark, one of the only two men who were able to stay the limit with him.

In the final bout of the evening, Pete Herman, bantamweight champion of the world, will tackle Harold Farese of Newark.

Benny Valzar, French featherweight champion, will meet Frankie Brown in the second bout of the night.

Willie Jackson another knockout star, will meet Tommy Tuchy in the semi-final bout of the night.

TIGER CENTRE BREAKS LEG IN GRID CONTEST

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 12.—That the services of Murray Scureman, Princeton's first-string centre, will be lost to the Tiger eleven for the rest of the season was learned here today. Scureman was borne from the field in the third quarter of the Princeton-Lafayette game here with what was first though to be a sprained ankle, but which has since been pronounced to be a badly broken leg.

Coach Roper will feel the loss of Scureman keenly, since the latter has been first-string pivot man from the first day of varsity practice and has been putting up a strong defensive game in the already none too strong Orange and Black line.

WALTHAM LOSES TO SOMERVILLE BY 6-0 SCORE

Beaten Team Outweighed, But Makes Game Struggle All the Way

Somerville High scored a 6 to 0 victory over Waltham High this morning. The only score of the game came in the first period. After a series of line plunges and a successful forward pass Patten to Chase, which brought the ball to the ten-yard line, two plays through the line brought it to the two-yard mark and "Flip" Laverty carried the ball over. Patten failed to kick the goal.

At no time was the Somerville goal line in danger, the ball being in Waltham territory nearly all the game. The Waltham team was outweighed twenty pounds to the man and Waltham's work in keeping the score down was commendable.

Several times after the first touchdown Somerville was in the position to score, but each time was held for downs and Waltham kicked out of danger.

DUNDEE 10 TO 9 FAVORITE TO DEFEAT YOUNG KLOBY

By JACK CONWAY.

Johnny Dundee, celebrated New York lightweight, was made a 10 to 9 favorite in the betting for his twelve-round bout with Young Kloby, Y. D. champion, which was scheduled to be decided at Lawrence this afternoon.

There was considerable speculation over the contest. The fans throughout the Merrimac valley were confident Kloby would win, while most of the Boston and Providence sporting men were supporting Dundee. They believed his dazzling speed and acknowledged ability as a boxer would enable him to earn the award of Referee Roy Green of Charlestown.

It was the first bout booked by the Atlas Club for its new arena, which has a seating capacity of 15,000. There are 6,000 seats on the ground, while there are 9,000 bleacher seats. Preparations were made to handle a large outpouring of fans from all parts of New England.

The Cuddy brothers, John and George, control the Atlas Club. They promoted the Britt-Valger contest in Lawrence early last Summer and have made reputations as clean sportsmen. They are backed by the Army and Navy and Civilian Board of Boxing Control.

There are few boxers who have as many followers as Dundee. He has been before the public for a decade and has been the hero of more than 150 torrid ring engagements. Dundee is one of the most scientific boxers the lightweight class has developed. He moves around the ring like a ghost, and always seems to pull the right thing at the right time.

No matter how rugged his opponents are, Dundee always seems to finish it front. He can fight as well as box. When hit hard by an opponent, he forgets for the time being his clever style of milling and swaps punches with his rival. This is one of the reasons he is so popular with the fans everywhere. Let Dundee once show in a city and he is twice as great a card on his second appearance. There is something catching about Dundeeism or whatever you want to call it.

Since Benny Leonard won the world's lightweight championship, Dundee has been the only boxer to cause him serious opposition. Leonard has been able to dispose of most of his opponents with ease, but every time he has clashed with Dundee it has been a battle to the finish. In their last meeting, the men were exchanging blows when the bell sounded at the end of the final round.

Dundee arrived in Boston last Friday from New York. The following day he went to Lawrence and finished training for his tussle with Kloby. The dapper New Yorker is in the best of condition and expects to win. He weighs about 135 pounds, while Kloby has agreed to make 140 pounds.

A five-pound weight advantage for his opponent does not worry Dundee. He has been in the habit of giving away as much as ten pounds and still winning.

"I could beat Kloby if he weighed a ton," said Dundee today. "That's the kind of confidence which has made Johnny one of the leaders in his boxing class.

Kloby has been one of the sensations of the ring during the past few months. His kayo victories over Phinney Boyle, Johnny Donovan, Charley Parker and Eddie Shevlin proves he is one of the hardest hitting men of his weight in the world.

Down Lawrence way they believe Kloby can stop any boxer anywhere near his own weight whom he can hit. And they don't bar Johnny Dundee.

Lawrence fans did not believe Dundee would attempt to bounce off the ropes with Kloby inside of the ring with him. The Y. D. champion is always on top of his game when he's fighting, and his admirers stated that if Dundee tries any circus stunts he's very liable to be kayoed.

Mike Castle of Lawrence was booked to clash with K. O. Brennan of Charlestown in a six-round contest. There was another eight-round event listed in which Kid Thomas of Lawrence and Tommy Monte of Salem were billed to furnish the thrills. The show was to be opened at 2 p. m. with a six-round preliminary.

Many Boston fans planned to take in the match. With Dundee as one of the principals and the Cuddy brothers backing the show, they were assured everything would be conducted satisfactorily.

Dyson Meets Girard in Twelve-Round Bout at C. A. C. Tonight

Bobby Dyson, New England bantamweight champion, will test his well-known title into the ring at the Commercial A. C. tonight when he meets Al Girard of the North End in a twelve-round bout. The boys will enter the ring at 118 pounds.

Dyson has been one of the leading stars of the boxing game hereabouts during the past few months. This eight-round contest with Girard is a scheduled affair, but Dyson is confident victories over Frankie Fay, Patsy Saunders, Barney Snyder, Paddy Wallace, Johnny Dundee and Eddie Owens ad Al Girard. His contest with Girard was a torrid affair and the North End youth believes he will reverse the result tonight.

Johnny Dundee will second Girard. The brilliant New York lightweight will come to Boston immediately following his bout with Jack Britton. Girard is a fast, clever boxer, and believes he'll conquer Dyson. As the latter is one of the hardest hitting little men developed in New England in the past decade, there should be plenty of action at the West End club.

Johnny Mooney of Newton and Joe Leonard of Roxbury will clash in the semi-final affair of eight rounds. There will also be another eight-round event in which Tommy O'Toole of South Boston and Arthur Rose of the North End will furnish the thrills.

Eddie McGoorty Is Disqualified in Paris Bout

Paris, Oct. 13.—Eddie McGoorty was disqualified for fouling his opponent, Balsac, in one of the boxing bouts marking the reopening of Wonderland.

The show will be opened by a six-round contest between Young Ambrose and Mike Silva.

The Armory A. A. will stage its weekly meeting in Mechanics Building tomorrow night. Jimmy Hill, Australian lightweight, and Benny Valger of New York, will meet in the feature contest of twelve rounds. Hill showed against Barney Adair at the Triple A and made a big hit with the fans by his dazzling work. In the event Hill disposes of Valger, he will be given a bout with Johnny Dundee at Lawrence. His style of milling is much along the same lines which has brought fame to the New Yorker.

Valger has had considerable success campaigning in New England rings. He has scored two victories over Frankie Britt, while he also disposed of Charley Parker.

The St. Joseph's Club of the West End will conduct an open amateur boxing tournament at the Commercial A. C. Wednesday night. A large number of entries have been received, and some spirited milling is anticipated.

The Watertown Arsenal A. A. will hold its second amateur boxing tournament at Cyprus Hall, Cambridge, on October 25. There will be bouts at 108, 115 and 135 pounds.

CHESS CHAMPION IS ANXIOUS TO VISIT U. S.

Philadelphia, Oct. 13.—Walter Penn Shipley, president of the Franklin Chess Club, has received a communication from Dr. Emanuel Lasker of Berlin, holder of the world's chess championship, which says Dr. Capablanca of Havana is eager to wrest from him. Lasker during the war busied himself with writing a book under the title, "The Philosophy of the Unattainable." In the letter he expresses a desire to come to America, if the club leader will put sufficient engagements in his way so that he will be able to return to a more normal existence than he has been accustomed to for the past few years.

Mr. Shipley has taken up the matter with the Franklin Club, by which has authorized him to offer the champion a two days' engagement.

REDS' MASCOT UP AT 4 TO LOOK FOR UNIFORM

Among the joy-stricken kids of Cincinnati is the young son of Frank Bancroft, the veteran business manager of the Reds.

Young Benny was favored with the job of world's series mascot, decked out in a brand-new uniform the kid was the first to set sail for the playing field.

"I had an awful time with that kid one morning," said Bancroft, smiling. "He was up at 4 o'clock looking for that uniform."

OVER 50 ANSWER MAT TEAM CALL AT CORNELL

Wrestling Coach Declares That Prospects for Successful Year Are Bright

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 13.—Prospects for wrestling at Cornell are bright, according to Coach W. C. O'Connell, '11. More than fifty candidates reported at the first practice, held in the Old Armory. Coach O'Connell characterized this as one of the best first-day showings he had ever seen at Cornell.

New men who have any natural ability for wrestling are especially wanted. Men who have had coaching under other instructors are often harder to teach than those who have had no experience. Few members of last year's team have reported as yet, but more are expected later.

From 1912 to 1917 Cornell won an unbroken series of intercollegiate championships in wrestling. With the return of O'Connell this year prospects for a repetition of former records are good.

The purpose of the wrestling instructor is that any man, for a nominal charge, may receive instruction in this branch of athletics. The work is not limited to members of the varsity team. During the course of the year a novice wrestling meet will be held for men who have never been on a team, with medals awarded for the winners of the various classes. A university championship meet will also be held.

NEW STRENGTH NEEDED IN COLUMBIA'S LINE

Columbia's victory over Vermont Saturday has resulted in an increased confidence among both coaches and members of the team. A strenuous week awaits the eleven in preparation for the game with Williams.

It was demonstrated Saturday that the right side of the line must be strengthened materially.

All of Vermont's gains were made through this side of the line, which was woefully weak. The left side, with Forsythe, Towns and Kennedy, did well taken care of, and will hold its own against the best of them. Weinstein, at right end, also performed capably, insuring safe protection of the wings.

Johnny Kenninger appeared out of position at guard, and will probably be moved back to his old position at centre. Devine was weak at left tackle, seeming unable to get under the plays. However, Scovil and Johnson offered a stonewall barrier to the Vermont backs when they were inserted.

NICHOLLS AND McLEAN TIE BRADY AND BOWDEN

Great Neck, N. Y., Oct. 13.—George McLean and Gil Nicholls tied Mike Brady and George Bowden on the Great Neck links.

The latter had a best ball of 67 to 68 for their opponents. McLean and Nicholls were 2 up at the turn, but by losing the 11th and 15th holes became all square. Brady and Bowden won the next, and a fine putt at the home hole by McLean evened matters again.

GRID TRAINING MODERNIZED AT PENN

Folwell Favors Process of Tuning Up Rather Than Continuous Drill

Philadelphia, Oct. 13.—Bob Folwell, Penn's head coach; "Big Bill" Roltenback, advisory coach, and Lawson Robertson, trainer of the Red and Blue football squad, all three of the youngest generation of coaches, have modernized football training.

"When I was a player," said Folwell, "we used to scrimmage on the very eve of a big game. I remember once prior to the game with the Indians we played until after dark. I considered I was capable of standing what the average player could take in the way of pace and training, and I realize that I was overburdened with training.

"I know I was not worked properly. This is not because of any flaw with the old school of coaches. It was the system, handed down to them from the ages, and they thought it correct. When at W. and J. I beat Yale three times, and because I timed my men up rather than drilled them until they were tired of football mentally and physically.

Rockenbach, who coached at State College and Syracuse, did not quite agree with Folwell's theory at first, but he was opposed to the old two-hour a day line buckling work, which has been the trend of training when he was an all-American star. He watched Folwell's theory and today is firmly converted to his modern method of preparing a machine.

Robertson, one of the best-known track trainers in the world, is handling and caring for the conditioning end of the Penn team this season. He adjusts the diet of his athletes in the big training house at Franklin Field. The results are remarkable in many ways, and Dr. Hancock, the team physician says the diet system should have been introduced years ago but that it seemed to be against the footballl code of plenty of roast beef and hard work, and no coach ever had the courage or foresight to change conditions.

GRAND CIRCUIT STARS READY FOR ATLANTA

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 13.—Horses, drivers, trainers and all the other appurtenances of Grand Circuit racing were transferred today to Atlanta preparatory to the opening tomorrow at Lakewood track of the annual meeting, which gives the South its only exhibition of the sport.

Twenty-two races are on the program for the week, including one for a purse of $2,500 offered by the Southeastern Fair Association. Direct Durnatt, driven by Murphy and Frank Howey, driven by Geers, and a number of other well-known Grand Circuit entries will contest for this prize. A number of purses have been offered locally, and there are also special events for Georgia horses, a number of which have been entered.

PRINCETON CENTRE BREAKS LEFT LEG

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 13.—Princeton will be without the services of Murray Scuyrman, the crack varsity centre in the remaining games of the schedule.

While running down the field on a punt, he was taken out from the rear by the Lafayette interference and his cleats failing to glide, his left leg was broken above the ankle.

New York, Oct. 13.—Thirty of the best amateur boxers in the country will compete tonight in the international boxing tryouts to be held under the auspices of the Metropolitan Association A. U. and the Seventy-first Infantry at the armory, Thirty-fourth street and Park avenue, to select three boxers to represent the United States in tournaments to be held at Denmark, Norway and Sweden the latter part of November.

Pittsburgh will be represented by Maxwell McCalpin in the 115-pound class, Ed Burke in the 125-pound class and Jack Burke in the 175-pound class.

More than 200 members of the Riverside Boat Club were present at the golden jubilee of that organization held at its clubhouse at Magazine Beach, Cambridge. A banquet was held in the trophy room of the club at 6:30, followed by addresses by several members of the organization.

Philip Galvin, who is seventy years old and the only living member of the founders, told how the club was formed in 1869 by employes of the Riverside Press. He said the club was originally founded for social and athletic purposes and was soon reorganized as one of the leading rowing clubs in New England.

TITLE HOLDERS IN SIMON PURE TOURNEY

Amateur Boxers Compete at New York in Elimination Bouts Tonight

New York, Oct. 13.—With two national title holders and one New York State champion entered, the interclty amateur boxing tournament which is to be conducted by the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory tonight, promises to be the best held in this district in many months. Not since the national championships, which were held early last Winter, will there be seen such a fine array of "simon pures" as will compete in this tourney. The bouts are being held to select the lads for the team which will engage in the international tourneys in Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

Pittsburgh, Boston and Baltimore are to be represented to their cost as will several other cities besides New York.

CLASSES COMPETING.

The classes to be contested are at 115 pounds, 125 pounds and 175 pounds. The winner in each class will sail from these shores on the steamship Stavangerfjord on October 17 for Bergen, Norway.

Charles Svoboda of the East Side House, one of the contestants in the 115-pound class, recently graduated from the 108-pound class, promises to cause the other lads in his class much trouble. It is expected that James Tomasulo of the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. of New Jersey, last year's national champion, and the East Side youngster will meet in the final bout.

Svoboda has made a creditable record for himself this season. In a score of bouts the only lad to stay the regulation three rounds with him was H. Grosse of the Pastime A. C. This bout took place in the Bronxdale A. C. two weeks ago. Svoboda receiving the judge's decision. He has never lost a decision this season. Listed among the lads he has knocked out are Dave Kanina of the Pastime A. A., national 108-pound champion, and Sol Seeman of the Brooklyn A. A., New York State champion.

HAS CLEAN RECORD.

Tomasulo also has a clean record and, if the two come together in the final bout, a lively contest is assured the sport-loving fans. Tomasulo, who recently discharged from the navy and, with a number of that branch of Uncle Sam's service, was selected as a member of the team which competed in the Allied Inter-Allied boxing championships. The other local lads entered in this class are Joe Lynch, Dave Kanina and Harry Glatzer.

In the 125-pound class, in which Boston and Pittsburgh will have representatives, the local association will pin its hopes on Dave Lassiter of the Ozanam Association, national and metropolitan champion. The lanky boxer made one decision this season. That was to Pat Rooney of Pittsburgh in an interclty tournament in this city. In the national championships later on, the local lad was awarded the title over the Smoky City lad.

EPSTEIN DANGEROUS.

The lad who is likely to prove Cassius Epstein of the Rutgers Gymnasium, who has been in the amateur game for the last two years, quietly holds decisions over Fred Hamilton of the Union Settlement A. C., last year's Inter-Allied champion, Rudolph Bolina of the Pastime A. C., runner-up for the metropolitan title, and C. N. Scanlon of the Union Settlement A. C. If Epstein and Cassidy sail through the trials on an even keel a keen contest can be expected in the final.

John Tomesheck of the New West Side A. A., one of the best schoolboy rules favorite in the light-heavyweight class. The New Yorker will be pitted against William Miller of the National A. C. of Brooklyn in one of the semi-final bouts. Miller was recently discharged from the United States Army and is reported to be in fine condition. Pittsburgh and Boston will also be represented in this class. The show which starts at 8 o'clock will be the first ever conducted by the Amateur Athletic Union at which women will be admitted.

DANNY NEEDHAM BEST WITH KIDNEY PUNCH

San Francisco, Oct. 13.—"One punch that I've always found good is the kidney punch," says the veteran Joe Choynski.

"To me there seems to be quite amusing to sit at a fight and hear remarks about the kidney punch when some of the best punches ever the knowledge of the man he is fighting and slams him on the button with the back of the hand. Al Wolgast, a world's champion, was supposed to know how to use the kidney punch, but could even Wolgast did not use it properly.

"The man who introduced the kidney punch was Danny Needham, and there's never been another man who could use the punch as Danny could. The kidney punch is a jab and not a swing. And it doesn't land on a side-wise punch on that soft spot in the side—just above the belt. One kidney punch or two, though painful, will not be very effective.

"Needham specialized on the punch and sometimes landed it as often as a dozen times in a round. He'd keep using it until the other fellow's side was blood raw and he caved in. And all the time, remember, it was a jab, and the sinking of the fist a few inches into the soft flesh."

LIPTON TELLS OF PLANS FOR BIG YACHT RACE

Sir Thomas Eager to Compete for Cup in Event in June

London, Oct. 13.—"I have suggested June 24 as the date for the first race for the America's cup," said Sir Thomas Lipton today, "but the New York Yacht Club, of course, has the privilege of naming the date and there is some reason to believe they will fix it later. It is also quite possible they may select another course than Sandy Hook," he added.

Whatever they decide, I know they'll show the utmost fairness. I've been racing in American waters for twenty years and have always been treated very kindly and fairly.

The Resolute, which was to have supported the Shamrock IV. in 1914, will probably be the defender next year.

"Captain Burton, an amateur sailor with a record of more than a thousand races with his own yacht, will sail the challenger and have full charge of the preparations. Some slight changes will be made in Shamrock IV., which is the fastest boat of her kind I have ever seen.

I expect to receive many mascots. The last time I raced in America my steam yacht was a regular menagerie. We had enough mascots to sink the yacht if they were all put aboard. I could never remember the full list, but it included nine Irish terriers, several Kansas grasshoppers, a horseshoe made by a champion blacksmith, several pedigreed black cats, many kinds of rabbits, an American eagle, half a hundredweight of shamrock leaves and four leaf clovers.

The eagle was lost the race. I threatened to turn the menagerie loose if everybody didn't clear off. I kept the American eagle, and disposed of the others. One woman wrote me who had a son who had had a dog that was the luckiest boy in the world. If I'd only taken him along I'd be sure to win. But I had to refuse him, on account of the number of animals on board. I was afraid the boy's dog might not hold out.

THE WICKED MARQUIS

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

NEW NOVEL FROM THE PEN OF THE FAMOUS AUTHOR

Love and Revenge Centre About an Agreeable English Aristocrat of the Old School and His Ancestral Estate

What Has Happened So Far

The Marquis of Mandeleys, an English nobleman of a type of days gone by, finds himself nearly bankrupt from law cases against the occupant of a cottage on his estate who refuses to vacate his own property. The Marquis' solicitor informs him that the sum of eighteen thousand pounds is needed to settle the court bills and that it would be useless to make another appeal, even to the House of Lords. A young woman speaks to the Marquis in the grill room of the Savoy and he snubs her. David Thain, a young American multimillionaire, protege of the Duchess, is introduced to the Marquis, who explains to the family his trouble with the cottage owner, Vont. Thain tells of crossing the ocean with a man of that name. The Marquis relates to Thain how he took the daughter of Vont away with him. After luncheon he calls on Marcia Hannaway. She tells him that the allowance he has made her has not been paid recently, and he has a row with his solicitor about it.

MR. WADHAM, JUNIOR, less affected than his father by tradition, and prizing himself more upon that negligible gift of common sense, interposed respectfully but firmly.

Not Responsible

"We can scarcely be responsible," he pointed out, "for your lordship's indisposition to read letters containing business information of importance."

The Marquis changed his position slightly and looked at the speaker. Mr. Wadham, Jr., became during the next few seconds profoundly impressed with the irrelevance, almost the impertinence of his words.

"I should have imagined," the former said severely, "that my habits are well-known to the members of a firm whose connection with my family is almost historical."

"We should have waited upon your lordship," Mr. Wadham, Sr., admitted. "But with reference to the case of this young lady, not hearing from your lordship, we wrote to her, very politely, indicating the great difficulties which he had to face in the management of the Mandeleys estates, owing to the abnormal agricultural depression, and we promised to send her a check as soon as such a step became possible. In reply we heard from her—a most ladylike and reasonable letter it was—stating that owing to recent literary successes, and to your lordship's generosity through so many years, she was only too glad of the opportunity to beg us to cease from forwarding the quarterly amount as hitherto. Under those circumstances, we have devoted such small sums of money as have come into our hands to more vital purposes."

"I suppose it did not occur to you," the Marquis observed, "that I am the person to decide what is or is not vital in the disposition of my own moneys."

"That is a fact which we should not presume to dispute," the lawyer admitted, "but I should like to point out that, on the next occasion when we had a little money in hand, your household steward, Mr. Harrison, was here in urgent need of a thousand pounds for the payment of domestic bills connected with the establishment in Grosvenor Square."

"It appears to me," the Marquis said, with a trace of irritability in his tone, "that the greater part of my income goes in paying bills.

He Was Speechless

The complaint was one which for the moment left Mr. Wadham speechless. He was vaguely conscious that an adequate reply existed, but it eluded him. His son, who had adopted the attitude of being outside the discussion, was engaged in an abortive attempt to appear as much at ease in his own office as this client of theirs certainly was.

"I will discuss the matter of Miss Hannaway's future allowance with that young lady, and let you know the result," the Marquis announced. "In the meantime, how do we stand for ready money?"

"Ready money, your lordship!" his senior visitor gasped.

"Precisely," the Marquis assented. "It is, I believe, a few days after the period when my tenants usually pay their rents."

"Your lordship," Mr. Wadham said, speaking with every attempt at gravity, "if every one of your tenants paid their full rent and brought it into this office at the present moment, we should still be unable to pay the interest on the mortgages due next month, without further advances from the bank."

"These mortgages," the Marquis remarked thoughtfully, "are a nuisance."

So self-evident a fact seemed to leave little room for comment or denial. The Marquis frowned a little more severely and withdrew his forefingers from the desk.

"Figures, I fear, only confuse me," he confessed, "but for the sake of curiosity, what do my quarterly rents amount to?"

"Between seven and eight thousand pounds, according to deductions, your lordship," was the prompt reply. "That sum I presume will be coming in from your agent, Mr. Merridrew, within the course of a few days. The interest upon the mortgages amounts to perhaps a thousand pounds less than that sum. That thousand pounds, I may be permitted to point out to your lordship, is all that remains for the carrying on of your Grosvenor square establishment, and for such disbursements as are necessary at Mandeleys."

"It is shameful," the Marquis declared severely, "that any one should be allowed to anticipate their income in this way. Mortgages are most vicious institutions."

Tin Mines

Mr. Wadham coughed.

"Your lordship's expenditure, some ten or fifteen years ago, rendered them first necessary. After that there was the unfortunate speculation in tin mines—"

"That will do, Mr. Wadham," his client interrupted. "All I desire to know from you further is a statement of the approximate sum required to clear off the mortgages upon the Mandeleys estates?"

Mr. Wadham, looked a little startled. His son stopped whistling under his breath and leaned forward in his chair.

"Clear off the mortgages," he repeated.

"Precisely."

"The exact figures," was the somewhat hesitating pronouncement, "would require a quarter of an hour's study, but I should say that a sum of £225,000 would be required."

"I have not a head for figures," the Marquis acknowledged gravely, "but the amount seems trifling. I shall wish you good-day now, gentlemen. Two hundred and twenty thousand, I think you said, Mr. Wadham?"

"That is as near the amount as possible," the lawyer admitted.

The Marquis drew on his gloves, a sign that he did not intend to honour his adviser with any familiar form of farewell. He inclined his head slightly to Mr. Wadham, and more slightly still to Mr. Wadham, Jr., who was holding open the door. The small boy, who was on the alert, escorted him to the front steps, and received with delight a gracious word of thanks for his attentions. So the Marquis took his departure.

Mr. Wadham, Junior, closed the door and threw himself into the chair which had been occupied by their distinguished client. There was a faint perfume of lavender after remaining in the atmosphere. His eyes wandered around the further rows of tin boxes which lumbered the wall.

"I suppose," he murmured, "it's a great thing to have a Marquis as one's client."

"I suppose it is," Mr. Wadham, Senior, assented gloomily.

"Father, do you ever feel at ease with him?" his son asked curiously. "Do you ever feel as though you were talking to a real human being, of the same flesh and blood as yourself?"

"Never for a single moment," was the vigorous reply. "If I felt like that, John, do you know what I should do? No? Well, then, I'll tell you. I should have these tin boxes taken out, one by one, and stacked in the hall. I should say to him, as plainly as I am saying it to you —'We lose money every year by your business, Marquis. We've had our turn. Try some one else—and go to the Devil!'"

"But you couldn't do it!" Mr. Wadham, Junior, observed disconsolately.

"I couldn't," his father agreed, with a note of subdued melancholy in his tone.

CHAPTER VI.

LADY MARGARET, who chanced to be the first arrival on the night of the dinner party in David Thain's honor, contemplated her sister admiringly. Letitia was wearing a gown of ivory satin, a form of attire which seemed always to bring with it almost startling reminiscences of her Italian ancestry.

"So glad to find you alone, Letty," she remarked, as she sank into the most comfortable of the easy chairs. "There's something I've been wanting to ask you for weeks. Bob put it into my head again this afternoon."

"What is it, dear?" Letitia inquired.

"Why don't you marry Charlie Grantham?" her sister demanded abruptly.

"There are so many reasons. First of all, he hasn't really ever asked me."

"You're simply indolent," Lady Margaret persisted. "He'd ask you in five minutes if you'd let him. Do you suppose Bob would ever have thought of marrying me, if I hadn't put the idea into his head?"

"You're so much cleverer than I," Letitia sighed.

"Not in the least," was the prompt disclaimer. "I really doubt whether I have your brains, and I certainly haven't your taste. I've only thing that I have, and always had, is common sense, common sense enough to see that girls in our position in life must marry, and the sooner the better."

"Why only our class of life?"

"Don't be silly! It's perfectly obvious, isn't it, that the daughters of the middle classes are having the time of their lives. They are all earning money. Amongst them it has become quite the vogue to take situations as secretaries, or lecturers or that sort of thing, and it simply doesn't matter whether they marry or not. They get all the fun they want out of life."

"It sounds quite attractive," Letitia admitted. "I think I shall take a course in typewriting and shorthand."

"You won't," Margaret rejoined. "You know perfectly well that that is one of the things we can never do. You've got to marry first. Then you can branch out in life in any direction you choose—art, travel, amours or millinery. You can help yourself with both hands."

"Which have you chosen, Meg?"

"Oh, I am an exception!" Margaret confessed. "You see, I've had such fun, and I've never got over the joke of marrying him. Besides, I haven't got a craving for things at all. I am not temperamental like you. Where's father?"

"Just back from the country. He'll be here in time, though."

"And who's dining?"

"Charlie, for one," Letitia replied, "Aunt Caroline, of course, and uncle, Mrs. Honeywell, and the American person. The party was got up on account of her. I expect father wants to borrow money from him."

"He doesn't look an easy lender," Lady Margaret remarked.

No One Proof

"There's no one proof against father," Letitia declared. "He is too exquisitely and transparently dishonest. You know, there's a man's story about the clubs that he once borrowed money from Lewis at 5 per cent. interest."

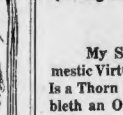
BEHOLD, there was weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth in the House of the Husbands.

And the eldest among them arose and spake, saying:

"My Sons, let us form the Union of Husbands, that we may protest against that which drove us hither—even the Seven Deadly Domestic Virtues of Women!



"For, lo, many a marriage, which storms of temper have not shattered nor shaken, hath sagged in the middle and come APART under the weight of these. And I have seen IT!

"Verily, verily, a man may find it in his heart to forgive a woman that seeketh to purify his soul and remodel his character; but she that cloueth his DESK and "tideth up" his private papers, who can endure her? For what man can find a thing which is in the right place, after he hath been accustomed all the days of his bachelorhood to look for it in the wrong place?

"Go to! An husband may bear patiently with her, that ventureth to expurgate his language, and to bring his morals within the pure food laws; but she that dareth to disinfect his seasoned PIPE with hot water and soapsuds shall be called 'PEST' among us forever.'

"Lo, a married man may cheerfully suffer his spouse to cut off his bachelor friends one by one, and to cast off his favorite cronies; but she that casteth away his 'treasures,' even the cigarette coupons and broken penknives and defunct lead pencil stubs and the litter within his top bureau drawer shall feel the might of his wrath and be covered with reproach. She sickeneth his soul.

"Behold, dust upon the furniture and cobwebs on the ceiling may be supported in silence; but a wife that upheaveth the house and keepeth it going like unto a boiler factory all morning, so that it may be neater and more comfortable than an operating room all evening—who can bear her?

"Verily, verily, a sloppy housewife is a thorn in the flesh; but an home that is a Show Place and a mausoleum is an affliction of the spirit. And a husband feeth therefrom as from a prison and seeketh the House of Husbands—which is called 'The Club'!

"Hence are we here, my Sons, that we may STRIKE for Husbands' Rights!"

And when he had finished speaking all the husbands clapped their hands and cried "Hear! Hear!"

And thereupon each of them arose and took his hat and departed that he might be at home in time for dinner.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1919, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

MY hand was already on the telephone receiver when a tiny, tumbling sound arrested my attention and the motion I was beginning to make. I clutched the receiver, but did not lift it from the hook. After a second of fright the sound explained itself—a key in the lock. And as I stared, waiting for I scarcely knew what, the door opened cautiously and Jim tip-toed over the threshold.

I stared at him—and he at me—in a sort of daze. At last he moistened his lips and muttered:

"Anne! What are you doing up at this hour?"

"Come in and shut the door," I said.

My voice sounded flat and indifferent. I was tired and hurt. And suddenly I didn't see how a woman could imagine that she cared for a man who hurt her so much—who gave her, in fact, practically nothing but wounds. Wounds to her pride. Wounds to love. Wounds to life itself. . . . No woman could possibly go on loving a man who bruised love over and over, each time she nursed it back to life. . . . I saw this suddenly with dreadful clearness.

Jim shut the door and limped across the room toward me.

"I'm dog tired," he said, "dog tired. And you look fresh as a daisy. Where were you anyway when I phoned last night?"

Hard to Explain

His voice took on a querulous tone, and suddenly his eye lighted on the letters pricked out on the white porcelain annunciator.

"A message in the office. May be important. Let's have it." He flung at me as he swayed down on to the chaise longue at the foot of the beds.

So I took down the telephone receiver which I had stood clutching all this while and asked for the message for room 814. Then I turned to repeat it to Jim, flexing the stiff fingers of my left hand and noticing vaguely as I did so that my knuckles were white.

"It's the message you phoned in for me last night—that you had to meet Mr. Cosby at the station and might go out of town with him and in that case wouldn't be in till morning. . . . I don't see why I didn't get it."

"Why you didn't get it?" Jim's eyes traveled over my finery with an amused air of appraisal. "Because you were out. That's evident. But you keep pretty wild hours, Anne. Were you with Vivienne or Phoebe?"

"I wasn't out." I said wearily and without troubling to give any particular emphasis to my words.

"Aw—tell that to some other guy, not to Jimmie. Who took you out, Anne?"

"I tell you I wasn't out of the place," I repeated pettishly.

Jim lurched to his feet and took a step that paralyzed us. His straightened up so that his tired, lined face was way above mine and I had to throw back my head to watch his eyes. In a sort of disgust I noticed how heavy and lustreless they were and that there were little puffs under them.

Anne Rebels

A queer, impish light flickered into Jim's eyes, and he caught my wrists in one of his hands and drew me very close, tilting my face to his lips with the other hand. His touch annoyed—even frightened me. I dragged myself out of his clasp and flung him from me.

"Let me alone," I said. "You've forfeited the right to touch me."

"Don't worry. I won't touch you again in a hurry," he laughed mirthlessly. "But now I'll trouble you to tell me what you've done that makes you afraid to have your husband kiss you."

"It isn't what I've done," I snapped. "It's what you've done. Staying out like this on our very first night back at the Walgrave. And leaving me to wait and wait—all by myself—like this—and eat my dinner alone. It's humiliating. It's cruel."

My voice took on an aggrieved tone as I recited the tale of my wrongs. But Jim stood eyeing me incredulously and coldly.

"Don't be absurd and childish, Anne. I may be tired, but you can't string me along like this. Why do you try to lie to me? You can't get away with it, by Jingo. Were you out with Norreys?"

"I tell you I wasn't out," I said sullenly. "It's not I who should give an account of myself—but you. I dressed to go down to dinner, and then hadn't the heart to brazen it out in the dining-room alone so I came up and ordered my dinner here. I suppose they tried me here while I was downstairs and paged me in the dining-room after I returned to the room."

"That dress—if you were in all evening—why are you still wearing it?"

"Because I fell asleep waiting for you," I said in a voice that threatened to tremble. "I shall never sit up for you again. That I promise myself. And now perhaps you'll—condescend to give me some idea what you were doing."

But when he answered, I almost wished that I need not have known.

"Oh, I was having a little session of Blind Tiger with some oil man Crosby went to the station to meet," said Jim. "Blind Tiger—poker, you know."

"You're gambling again," I whispered.

"Gambling!" Jim laughed. "Say, what's my whole business—the business that buys you suites, like this, at the Walgrave?"

A Daily Recipe

By MONSIEUR CHARLES A. PERRAUDIN, Delmonico's Chef

Tripe Lyonnaise

Have some fresh tripe, white and well cooked, cut into strips two inches long by a quarter of an inch wide. Mince four ounces of white onions, and fry them slowly in a pan with one-half butter. In the meanwhile, fry the tripe in another pan. When the contents of both have attained a nice brown color, mix them together and continue frying for ten minutes, totting them constantly. When ready, season with salt, pepper, lemon juice and chopped parsley. Drain off the butter and serve on a very hot dish.

Household Hints

Half a cupful of milk put in a dishpan full of hot water will serve instead of soap. It softens the water, keeps the hands better, because it will not roughen them like soap, and brightens dishes, cleaning off all grease, and leaving no scum in the pan.

* * *

In order to clean black cloth and yet preserve or restore the color, sponge with logwood and ammonia. Infuse the logwood chips in a jar of boiling water placed in a pan, strain, and use cold, adding a teaspoonful of ammonia to half a pint of logwood. This solution should be guarded as a poison.

* * *

When one has the same meat once or twice, and the joint is rather large, a good way to make a tasty dinner is to cut the meat in slices, dip in beaten egg, and then in breadcrumbs seasoned with salt and pepper and a few mixed herbs, and fry till slightly browned. Serve with some gravy and mashed potato.

The Livable Room

By Loretto C. Lynch

"WAY off," roared the director of a certain famous motion picture studio in Southern California the other day. "It lacks hominess. The room is too stiff—looks like a display in a furniture store—that scene does——"

In every motion picture studio great care is given to the detailed arrangement of the setting. Just so should we homemakers give especial care and thought to the settings or arrangements of the rooms of the home in which all the great emotions that make up life are enacted.

A well furnished home is or ought to be an accomplishment. No piece of furniture nor bit of ornamentation should ever be purchased for the sake of filling space. It should be provided because it fills a definite need—be that need usefulness or beautification.

I am in receipt of a number of letters from young folks about to furnish their first home and they ask for a few general hints to guide them in making the wisest selection. It would be quite impossible to give very specific advice, because what is quite suitable for one climate and purse is quite unsuited to another.

It is most unwise to begin the purchase of your furniture until you have seen the home it is to go into. The large, spacious room calls for the more massive types, while the small room, such as the average apartment offers, calls for the smaller, lighter varieties.

In looking at a motion picture, if the scene happens to be a room, before any of the characters come upon the scene, can you not tell something about that scene by the furniture and its arrangement? We immediately sense the lonely hall bedroom and we know the name type of person it belongs to the little homemaker who finds great delight in bringing bits of brightness and cheer into the room.

IF MOTHERS ONLY KNEW

Thousands of Children Suffer from Worms and Their Mothers Do Not Know What the Trouble Is.

Signs of worms are: Constipation, sour stomach, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full belly with occasional gripings and pains about the navel, pale face or leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nose, itching of the rectum, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, little red points sticking out on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever.

Mrs. Ira Roberts, 502 Asylum street, Flint, Mich., used Dr. True's Elixir for her little baby girl when she was sick. Mrs. Roberts wrote to Dr. J. F. True & Co.: "My little baby girl is cured of her worms." And in a later letter she wrote: "Baby is fine and I think it was your medicine (Dr. True's Elixir, The Family Laxative and Worm Expeller) that helped her. If your child is ill start giving Dr. True's Elixir at once. Buy Dr. True's Elixir at your dealers at once. Three sizes.

MME. HEINK IN FINE VOICE AT CONCERT

Gives Well-Arranged Program at Symphony Hall; Pianist La Forge Charms

Loyal followers, the music loving element of Boston, filled Symphony Hall Sunday afternoon to hear the first (and last) concert program of Mme. Schumann-Heink this season. The hall was crowded to capacity and patrons who came late were compelled to stand along the walls of the main floor.

When the singer appeared with Frank La Forge, her pianist, she was accorded the same reception as last March—a reception long to be remembered.

In all, Mme. Schumann-Heink sang twelve numbers, each with her delightful charm of voice. She also gave a number of encores. The numbers contain a variety of themes, pathetic, humorous; but the majority contain the spirit of the recent victorious war. Of these, "When Pershing's Men Go Marching Into Picardy," was most royally received.

"Taps" was fine; "Have You Seen Him in France?" brought memories to many present—but "I'm a Messenger" acted as a mendicant. It brought a hearty laugh and a roar of applause. Mr. La Forge displayed rare humor in the composition of the verses.

Mr. La Forge as soloist offered piano selections between numbers by the singer. "Romance," his own composition, was a delightful melody that reached the hearts of his listeners. His other numbers were played with the skill of a master, and he gave many encores.

PRINCIPALS IN ROMANCE OF WAR TO MARRY

Kathryn M. I. O'Donnell, former chief yeoman (F) of the navy, who is to wed Sergeant-Major James A. O'Neill in Brighton on October 22.

Scors another victory for Dan Cupid over his age-long rival, Mars. The god of Love's winning became known today with the announcement of the approaching marriage of Miss Kathryn M. I. O'Donnell, former chief yeoman (F), and Sergeant-Major James A. O'Neill of the North Atlantic Coast Artillery District.

It was a case of the petit delcy invading the enemy's territory. He did it fearlessly, only occasionally halting to employ strategem.

Miss O'Donnell, through her position, was an important cog of the war machinery in Boston. She was stationed at the headquarters of the First Naval District in the Little building. The sergeant-major was obliged to go there occasionally to transact affairs of the Coast Artillery. That is, he was "obliged" at first, but according to his friends it was soon observed that he never lost an opportunity to go to the Little Building for conferences with the chief yeoman (F). Finally he even went so far as to invent excuses, they assert.

Now the god of War is pretty much of a "has-been" so far as the young couple is concerned although Miss O'Donnell retains her position with the navy under the Civil Service. They are thinking more about the wedding which will take place in Brighton on October 22.

Violinist Displays Rare Dramatic Skill in Program of Modern Work

One more concert (jointly, with Thaye, later in the season) and Mischa Elman will say good-by to America until the fall of 1921. All seats at Symphony Hall were filled and patrons were lined up, three deep, in the aisles along the side and rear walls of the main floor during his concert yesterday.

Mr. Elman offered the following program, with Josef Bonime as pianist: Sonata in D major, Handel; concerto in F-sharp minor, Ernst; Chaconne, Bach; paraphrase on Rubinstein's "The Dew is Sparkling," Elman; contre dances, Beethoven-Seiss-Elman; Kol Nidrei, Bruch; Hungarian Dance No. 7, Brahms-Joachim; melodie, Tschaikowsky; Caprice Basque, Sarasate.

He displayed rare ability and skill as a master of the violin. His music flowed freely, the notes sweeping to varying shades of expression.

Round after round of applause followed and he was forced to give many encores. His paraphrase on Rubinstein's "The Dew is Sparkling," was excellent.

His artistry is familiar to Boston music lovers and his charming skill in every number he played only emphasized his complete mastery over his chosen instrument. He is one of the few great living violinists and his present concert afforded full opportunity to observe his full play of dramatic feeling.

Bonime's contribution to the program was equally artistic if rather short.

GYMNASIUM TO OPEN AT UPHAM'S CORNER

The Columbia Road Gymnasium, Upham's Corner, Dorchester, will open Thursday evening for the male classes.

Owing to the number of gymnasiums in this city being occupied by the Massachusetts State Guard, they will not be open to the public. Instructor John J. Lane is having assisted by Instructor Samuel Smith in anticipation of extra large classes this year. Already the women's classes, which opened last Thursday night, have doubled the usual registration.

A special effort will be made this year by instructors to interest men in a civil service class for candidates to the fire and police departments.

Brazil Helps Its Railroads

In an effort to further railway development in its domain the Brazilian government has not only constructed and bought roads but guaranteed the interest on the capital invested in the construction of others. During 1918 it paid nearly $4,500,000 as guaranty of interest.

JOHNSON SEES TRIUMPH FOR AMERICANISM

By Universal Service.

Ogden, Utah, Oct. 12.—"A triumph for Americanism" was the expression of Senator Hiram W. Johnson here concerning his Pacific coast and Far West tour against the League of Nations and peace treaty.

During the long stretch covering California, Oregon, Washington, Montana and Utah, he was received by enormous and enthusiastic audiences. His tour was watched by men who are carefully gauging public sentiment. It has been hailed as a runner of important moves at Washington. Not a doubt exists as to the "awakening of the people."

A WONDERFUL TRIP.

Senator Johnson said:

"It has been a wonderful trip. I have ever had an abiding confidence in the people. I have never doubted that upon a moral or a patriotic issue the great mass of our people are always right when they understand. Upon an important question the only problem is to see that the facts are presented and the issue made plain.

"Speaking generally the manipulators of publicity have been for the League of Nations.

"The vocal and vociferous, those who court the limelight and seek approval by expression of an obvious generality, have been its advocates. Until the last few months the ordinary citizen has accepted without question and without knowledge of the document itself the repeated assertions of those who publicly embraced the league before its contents were known.

SAME RESPONSE EVERYWHERE.

"When the sinister purposes of the instrument were disclosed it became necessary, whatever labor and effort were required, to bring home to the people the facts. This has measurably been done. Everywhere there has been the same response, the West has differed not a bit from the East.

"The Pacific Coast tour has been more than successful. It has been in no sense personal or partisan. It has been a triumph for Americanism."

Senator Johnson was met at Ogden by Mrs. Johnson and departed for Washington.

ACTOR PLANNING NEW THEATRE IN BOSTON

Will Have Comfortable Sofa Chairs and Produce Modern Plays

Scene. Back stage, Plymouth Theatre.

Persons: Woman interviewer and Leon Gordon, latter dressed in evening trousers, white shirt, sky-blue dressing gown and cigarette.

He: "Well, well, well! How do you do? It's years since I've seen you. How are all the family?"

She: "How do you like playing in 'Breakfast in Bed,'"

"Wonderful! Have a cigarette?"

"No, thanks."

"Now, now, now!"

"No, I tell you, they make me cough."

"How ladylike! How are you, anyway?"

"Never mind about me. Who's getting this interview? When are you coming back to Boston to live."

"As soon as I finish my contract with Mr. Woods. Then I shall have a theatre here, with comfortable sofa chairs, the only ones of their kind in the country, and produce modern plays. We expect to break ground for the building by next Spring."

"How about your own plays?"

(Mr. Gordon's "Watch Your Neighbor," a play produced by Oliver Morosco, had a marked success, opening in Los Angeles about a year ago, and ran sixteen weeks in New York. "Leave the Woman Out," a one-act piece, was produced in Boston.)

"Oh, I'm working on another, and so did the pup who left.

WINTER GARDEN ACTS WIN BIG AUDIENCE

First Concert of "Monte Christo, Jr." Players Well Presented at Opera House

With a variety of clever acts the first of the Sunday evening concerts given by the members of the "Monte Christo, Jr." company proved that this innovation is worth while. It included the feature numbers of the famed Winter Garden organization and delighted a large and happy audience.

Chic Sale, he of the bucolic characterization, added zest to the well-arranged program by his quiet and inimitable fun-making. His work differs from the old "rube act" as do eggs in point of age, and his stunt never fails to draw forth many laughs.

There wasn't a weak act on the bill and such numbers as the Four Higgie Girls, the Liberty Four, Margie Lesnair and Company and Katherine Galloway added their clever work to the excellent performance.

J. Francis Dooley and Corrine Sales, Esther Walker and Ellis Irwin succeeded in winning a deserved share of applause. Jack Squires and his Butterfly Girls made a distinct impression as did the Watson Sisters.

It was a pleasing concert and emphasizes the fact that these performances are worth while and cannot but prove popular.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN OCTOBER 13, 1919 BOSTON

Senator Walsh Lives Up to the Hopes of His Friends

Senator Walsh has lived up to the hopes of his friends. He has refused to follow the leadership of his party into the morass of immorality, broken promises, intrigues, wars and oppressions, into which the present form of the League of Nations would plunge us. In the United States Senate he delivered an argument against the present form of the League of Nations which so aroused the galleries to enthusiasm that it took great severity on the part of the president of the Senate to keep senatorial decorum in that section of the chamber.

Senator Walsh attacks the League of Nations in three principal points, namely, the general spirit which is breathed into it by the imperialistic statesmen who, overreaching President Wilson, actually framed it in Paris for their own imperialistic, tyrannical, aggrandizing objects. He shows that it will not tend to prevent wars, but will actually tend to provoke wars; that it is not a league to aid the keeping of peace, but a defensive and offensive alliance to protect three nations in their enjoyment of the spoils of war, the taking of which is sure to provoke another war as it always has provoked war down through history.

Then the Senator attacks the provision which gives Great Britain six votes in the League of Nations to one vote which is given to America. It is not necessary to discuss this question. The only thing that needs to be considered concerning it is the state of mind of the President, who could consent to give his country one-sixth the vote which is given to another nation with whom we have been more times at war and more times on the edge of war than with any other nation in the world and with whom we shall in the near future come more times in conflict concerning those interests which causes war than with any other nation.

We all ought to read the Senator's argument. Space in this column would not admit a worthy discussion of it. Mr. Walsh has done himself and Massachusetts great honor, and it is a matter of comfort to our people that on the question which is above partisan politics our two United States Senators are standing shoulder to shoulder.

Little did the people of Massachusetts realize when they elected Mr. Walsh and defeated his Republican opponent that on the most vital question which will be presented to the Senate for a decision during the lifetime of any of the candidates, they were making it certain that Massachusetts would speak with the single voice. At a private dinner of Massachusetts Republicans at Washington shortly after Senator Walsh was elected, Senator Lodge told his Republican colleagues that the saddest moment of his political career was when he was obliged to take Mr. Walsh upon his arm and march down the aisle with him to present him to the Senate. Senator Lodge knows the kind of pressure that has been brought to bear upon him to vote for this league without change. He knows the source whence that pressure comes and he knows whether that pressure would have been unavailing against both the Massachusetts Senators if Mr. Walsh had been defeated and Mr. Lodge had been saved the saddest moment of his political career.

The Office Boy That Works for You

Here is an editorial written by a Boston American office boy. He handed it in as a contribution to the paper. The reason that the Boston American is printing this is that it is a clear message from an ambitious boy to the man higher up.

This boy probably works for YOU. Some day he will climb out of the office boy class and go into a bigger field, and from there heavens only knows where he will go, for it is the boy of today that is the boss of tomorrow.

Read this editorial, because it is a message from a boy. He is probably in your own office.

Did you ever stop and think about your office boy's future? Did you ever stop and talk to him and give him a little encouragement? Stop work for a moment and think of these two questions.

Being an office boy for a Boston newspaper and having learned all that an office boy should know when in the newspaper business, I will try to describe an office boy's career.

The average office boy comes to work between the hours of 8 and 9 in the morning and stays till about 4 or 5 at night. His duties commence as soon as his coat is on the rack. The first thing that comes to his ears is that everlasting call, "Boy! Boy!" The first thing he does when he hears that call is to look around and see who is calling. Sometimes there may be three or four persons calling. Who should he go to first is the question he asks himself. The best he can do is to run to each as quickly as his two feet will carry him, because in a newspaper office there is a "bawling out" always for the office boy. He is asked to clean the desk when a bottle of ink is spilled or some other trouble occurs which the reporter or the editor wouldn't straighten out himself. He is made to run errands for all men over him; and sometimes there are as many as fifty or a hundred men. Dinner time comes and he is sent out for this one or for that one to get his dinner, and sometimes there is an argument because he forgot to put a little salt on the sandwich or a little sugar in the coffee. All these things the office boy has to endure.

He is on his feet all day running from this side of the room to the other, always with his ears open. And always he gets sharp commands and reprimands. Still the office boy has to stand for that. Why? Well, for the simple reason that you have to—that is the answer to that.

Again, the office boy is sent here and there for all men. Sometimes he works three or four hours overtime. "Will my boss pay me for it?" "Will I be compared at the end?" That is the question that the office boy asks himself about his abilities.

There are a great number of boys who would like to get in the newspaper business and become something in later years. Are the offices willing to help them in any way to help their office boys along in any line? Are they trying to make them worthy of themselves? The Main Office owes some encouragement.

By K. C. B.

DEAR K. C. B.—I am a constant reader of your column, and, in fact, have gotten Dad and the rest of the family interested.

We had an argument this morning about the letters which sometimes appear at the head of your column. Dad says you write them yourself, and I say they are really sent to you.

We are anxiously waiting to see what you have to say about it. Please don't disappoint me. Very sincerely yours,

(MISS) B. E. M.

MY DEAR B. E. M.
I KNOW your Dad.
AND HE'S a nice man.
AND A good father.
BUT HE lacks something.
AND WHAT it is.
IS THE very thing.
THAT YOU possess.
AND THAT makes you believe.
THAT THE letters I print.
ARE REALLY letters.
THAT COME in the mail.
AND, OF course, I know.
THAT IT isn't important.
AND DOESN'T matter.
IF I write them myself.
OR IF I don't.
AND FOR the reason.
THAT IT isn't important.
I WANT to ask you.
IF YOU won't ask Dad.
THAT INASMUCH.
AS HE doesn't know.
IF IT wouldn't be better.
IF HE'D make up his mind.
THAT THE letters are real.
AND ASK him, too.
IF IT wouldn't be better.
FOR ALL of us.
AND PARTICULARLY Dads.
IF WE'D try to believe.
THAT THE most of us.
DON'T EVEN lie.
IN SO slight a way.
AS I might lie.
IF IT just so happened.
THAT YOUR very letter.
WASN'T REALLY a letter.
THAT CAME in the mail.
BUT WAS written by me.
JUST TO fill up space.
AND TO give me something.
TO WRITE about.
AND YOU might tell Dad.
IF HE'LL just do that.
AND FOLLOW it through.
IN THE bigger things.
THAT REALLY count.
HE'LL BEGIN to believe.
THAT THIS rough old world.
IS A whole lot better.
THAN HE thought it was.
BUT BEFORE you tell him.
JUST LAY him a bet.
THAT THE letters I print.
DO COME in the mail.
AND PUT me down.
FOR HALF of the bet.
AND WE'LL make him sick.
HE THINKS he's wise.
JUST BECAUSE he's a Dad.
I KNOW those guys.

I THANK you.

Letters to the Editor

Irish Question

Editor Boston American:

In edition of October 2 Mr. Hodsdon of Beverly takes exception to the statement by President de Valera of the Irish Republic on the bookkeeping system followed by England. Now those statements of facts made by President de Valera are not only correct, but Mr. Hodsdon is unfortunate in the two examples which he criticizes.

In the first place, the books are kept in England, where all the money goes to be distributed as the Englishman sees fit, and then when the Irish complain he says do your best about it.

If Mr. Hodsdon knows anything about Ireland he should know that the award made by the commission in '98, which reported an enormous indemnity due Ireland in overtaxation since the union, according to the terms of the unspeakable scrap of paper whose terms even England would not keep, was never repaid to Ireland since.

Again, what money England spends in Ireland is spent to support her own garrison, from the viceroy down to the common pee er or policeman, whose salary is so arranged that their physical force in Ireland receives a compensation of $20 for every dollar paid for education.

The principle was to encourage the peeler and to discourage education or nationality. We have followed the same tactics here (quite English, you know) until today our teachers are striking and even our coppers have struck.

His example of Scotland is still more unfortunate, for if the Scotsman chooses to lie down and let the Englishman walk over him that is no reason why the Irishman or the American should do the same thing. To make a still more concrete case, let us suppose that a number of people around Beverly went down to the shore and drowned themselves, does it follow that Mr. Hodsdon would do likewise; or, vice versa, if Mr. Hodsdon took a jump into eternity from a cliff along the shore, is he sure that all Beverly would follow? Let him test it.

My advice to him is let Northcliffe and the English do their propaganda work and let the Irish question alone. It is settled, only let us recognize their republic. God bless them.

J. B. ROBINSON.

Foreign Loans and H. C. L.

Editor Boston American:

We are now beginning to talk about the United States as being a great big business house, and we are casting aside politics, and thinking in terms of business administration. If we consider our country from this standpoint do not the loans we have made to the allies have an important bearing upon the high cost of living? We have advanced the allies, according to the Boston News Bureau, a total of $9,646,419,494, as follows:

Great Britain	$4,277,000,000
France	3,047,974,777
Italy	1,618,922,872
Belgium	343,445,000
Russia	187,729,750
Czecho-Slovakia	55,320,000
Greece	48,236,629
Rumania	25,000,000
Serbia	26,730,465
Cuba	10,000,000
Liberia	5,000,000
Total	$9,646,419,494

Every dollar of this vast sum must come out of labor in some form or other. In addition to this enormous sum of money, we have the expenses of our government, which means billions more, which also comes out of labor. The money we have loaned outside the United States is practically dead horse for the present. It is true that there is an interest account which lightens the burden a little, but the tendency seems to be to loan more instead of less, and, therefore, this interest account does not in any degree lessen the burden that labor bears.

This enormous sum of money also represents taxation on labor, for the reason that, although we have bought billions of bonds from the government, we will have to retire these bonds by money raised by taxation from labor. All along the line this $9,646,419,494 shows its hand—it represents taxes on income, taxes on business, even the taxes that we charge the poor little kid on the ice cream horn, and still we as a government don't hesitate to spend our substance outside our own country. Most any old country, whether they have the assets or not, seems to be able to borrow from us.

Now, if we are going to be a great big business house and are going to have a business administration, we will have to stop this lending business if we are going to lighten labor's burden.

Let us be a business house for the United States alone and we will have enough to do.

HOME: LOVE, HARMONY, PEACE, NOT 4 WALLS

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

A HOME is an intangible thing. It doesn't consist of four walls, a number of rooms and a certain amount of furniture. It is a mental structure. "Out of my heart I build a home," describes it exactly. Its component parts are peace, harmony, love.

Some persons are more naturally home-makers and home-lovers than others, with all their interests and affection centred in it; and when the structure they have thought so secure proves to be only a flimsy shell and falls in ruins about them they feel as if the end of the world had come.

A woman has written me the story of her house in ruins. She is the wife of an ambitious young professional man. They have been married about two years and her happiness was complete upon the arrival of a baby.

Change in Husband

A short time afterward she noticed a change in her husband. She asked him the cause of it, and he told her he was very, very sorry, but that he no longer loved her. It was a terrible blow to her, and she could not believe it or understand it for a time; but now she is convinced that it is true. She says, to give her own words:

"Mrs. Woodrow, I haven't any education at all, I left school when I was in the sixth grade. I have found out that he has stopped loving me because I do not know anything. I have never met any of his friends and feel sure that he would be ashamed of me if I did. Please tell me what to do. I want him to be proud of me. I want to win back his love. I know that if I improve I can win him back again. I am not pretty or even good looking. Please give me some advice. There must be a way. I was going to tell him that he could have his freedom when I thought of you and was sure you could help me. If ever he leaves me I shall feel like killing myself. How can I improve?"

We are in the world, and must take it as it is and conditions and people as we find them. Here is a woman with a young baby and devotedly attached to a fanciful and erratic husband. There is no use in writing a sermon about his shortcomings. That is not going to help the situation. Neither shall I lay out a course of study and reading for the wife. No man ever fell in love with a woman because of her intellectual attainments.

Education in Frivolity

What you want for your purpose dear lady, is not a college diploma, but an education in frivolity. Cease at once to be a drab little recluse spinning a cocoon of sighs and tears about yourself, and become a butterfly. And never make the fatal mistake of hanging onto the lapels of your husband's coat and imploring him to love you.

You are very humble about yourself. You may not be pretty or even good-looking; but you must have some good points. Emphasize them. Take an interest in your clothes.

It isn't so much your clothes, it's the way you wear them that counts.

Then make your home as attractive as possible. Have good food, always selecting it with an eye to your husband's particular tastes. A busy man appreciates a restful, cheerful home and well-cooked meals as he does nothing else in life.

Emerge from your shell; acquire some friends of your own. Choose those from whom you can by intercourse and observation learn the social graces. You can pick up a great deal that way—the little things in manners and conversation that will give you an easy, pleasant bearing when you are out among people—and if in making new friends there happens to be a man or two among them, so much the better. The mere fact that other men like and admire you will make your husband sit up and take notice as nothing else would.

Read Your Newspaper

Read your newspaper from the first column to the last. Acquaint yourself in this way with what the world is doing and thinking. Find out the new books that people are talking about, and read them. Go to the new plays, hear some music. You will form opinions about these things; express them. Don't be overawed by others. Your views and opinions are quite as good as any one else's.

And, last, never ask your husband where he has been, or what he has been doing. Go your own way, and he is sure to come around to it.

Even the most philandering husband will think twice before leaving a happy home, a wife who does him credit and an attractive child.

A wife who is onto her job in the home is worth five sirens in the bush.

ANTS NEVER RUN, EXCEPT TOWARD ENEMY

By Garrett P. Serviss

I HAVE been considering the ways of the ant. No Summer passes but that I have rendezvous with the vivacious little six-leggers. It is not that I am a naturalist, but only that I had the good luck to be born in the country, in a place where big, black ants were numerous and pugnacious, and where I sometimes saw them fighting of their own accord, and often, I now regret to say, made them fight by rubbing their heads together. My observations quickly convinced me that no ant will stand that. The big caliper jaws engage at the first contact, and they never let go until something comes off—a limb, an antenna, or a head.

Never Runs From Foe

There is no more efficient fighter than an ant. He has exhaustless wind, indomitable courage, and double weapons, like Yarlarin's "double muscles." I never saw one run—except at the enemy.

It is fortunate for us that no animal of our size is constructed like an ant. Considering, too, what he is able to do with his microscopic speck of a brain, it is easy to believe that with a brain of human dimensions he would invent weapons that we shall never dream of, and that we haven't limbs enough to handle if we possessed the weapons.

I had so much confidence in my fighting black ants, when I was a non-pacifist boy, that I once pitted a champion of that breed against a spider. The spider is a mean fighter; he never fights fair and square like an ant. He depends on his fierce looks and is, in fact, a terrorist coward. He is a squealer, a quitter, and won't take punishment, but, like human beings possessing the same characteristics, is cruel to the point of devilishness.

To see him bale up a poor, helpless fly, tieing down the iridescent wings and wrapping them around the still living body of his victim with the infernal, sticky ropes that he spins out of himself, is alone sufficient to make anybody hate spiders. It is not the end proposed or attained, but the cold diabolism of the method that maddens the beholder.

Spider Flees Away

In the windows of "the wagon house" were the silky traps of many big spiders, horridly thatched with insect skeletons, and it was against one of these monsters of the window that I put my champion ant. I threw the ant into the web, and out of his dusty den instantly darted the spider. In a twinkling he was upon his supposed prey, and my nerves were on edge. I expected to see a terrific struggle. The spider was to the ant as Goliath to David, but I had complete faith in my "man."

He did not fail me, but what happened was not what I was looking for. The recollection of it brings back to my ears the laugh of delight mingled with derision with which I made the wagon house ring. The spider fled faster than he had come. Zip! he had come out, zip! he went back again. The caliper jaws had no chance to get hold. If they had closed once the ant world have gone into the den with the spider like a tiger on an elephant's back, and would never have come out again unless bearing a piece of the foe. Left to himself, he tore a hole in the web and dropped out, and I never tried the experiment a second time, which showed that I was not on a true scientific trail.

Insects Have Free Will

Watching ants has convinced me that insects have free will as truly as, though not as fully, as men. The ant does where he will, and not as certain biologists tell us, wherever unintelligent tropism sends him. Just while I write, under the trees, by a shady path, I see ant volition at work. I see an ant running as if to break his neck, almost kicking up the dust in his haste, and I wonder who scared him. But a minute later I perceive that he was not frightened, but merely in a hurry.

Instinct is inherited knowledge, and knowledge is experience gathered and interpreted by intelligence. Intelligence I can't define, but whatever it be at bottom, the ant has some of it, at least a glimmer, while we have, relatively to the ant, a good deal, but not by any means as much as we will have in some future age.
